EX-HUSBAND SUES EMOTIONAL STAR

Isabelle Fletcher Boardman Is Defendant in Counter-Divorce Action.

HER DECREE IS ATTACKED

Romance of Actress Who Was Wedded to Lawyer in Portland Shattered - San Francisco Is Abuzz With Interest.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11 .- (Special.) -Inabelle Fletcher Boardman, emoand other ardent roles, was named defendant in a counter-divorce suit begun resterday by Louis P. Boardman, a San Francisco attorney, from whom she secured an interlocutory decree of divorce after coming to the conclusion last year that a lawyer was not properly cast as the husband of an actress. Boardman alleges desertion as the ground for his suit, reciting in his complaint that the former leading woman of Ye Liberty Theater in Oakland deserted him in less than a year following their marriage in Portland, May 18, 1908.

The suit of Boardman will bring Isafendant in a counter-divorce suit begun

The suit of Beardman will bring Isa-belle Fletcher into the divorce court for the third time in her theatrical ca-reer. She divorced her first husband, an actor, and took the same initiative after deciding that she had made a mistake in marrying Boardman.

Divorce Taken Exception To.

As a man versed in the law Boardman took exception to the divorce that was allowed to the actress, maintaining that Soperior Judge Harris, of Oakland, was disqualified from presiding at the proceedings, because of his relationably with Clarence Reed, who was associate counsel for Miss Fletcher.
Besides this remote relationship, Beardman also took exception to being divorced because he considered that his wife was not a legal resident of California at the time of the proceedhigs. Miss Fletcher was playing at the time in Vancouver, R. C.

The flickering out of this romance of the tootlights caused a burn of talk about the Bay region, because of the social prominence of Miss Fletcher.

Suitors Are Many. Divorce Taken Exception To.

Sulfors Are Many.

While appearing in leading roles at the Liberty Theater she had in her train of sutters many men of wealth and position in Oakland and San Francisco. She was also an occasional figure at some of the smartest functions of the exclusive set.

Boardman had pressed his suit for the band of the actress unawares, and when news of their marriage came over the wire from Purtland it created semething of a stir. Miss Fletcher had gone to Portland to nill a theatrical engagement.

Following their marriage it was ansounced that Miss Fletcher would not return to the stage—a resolution that was as ephemeral as the resolution in imperamental Margaret Illington to spend the remainder of her married life in darning socks.

When Miss Fletcher finally did return to the stage there was a chorus of "I told you so."

Besides acting emotional roles in Oakland and elsewhere, Miss Fletcher appeared as a co-star with Richard Hotaling and also played with Robert Mantell for a season.

Oakland two weeks ago is that of William Permann, a former Roseburg business man. Permann had been ill for several months, and during the few weeks preceding his departure from Roseburg evidenced symptoms of insanity. In fact he informed friends upon numerous occasions that he intended to commit suicide in the event he falled to regain his health. Permann left Roseburg about three months ago with the intention of engaging in business at Springfield. Prom reports received here he never reached that city, neither have the lane County officers been able to nacertain his whereabouts. It is the opinion of Roseburg authorities that Permann went to Oakland, where he alighted from the train and proceeded a short distance from town, where he sent a bullet through his brain. The description of the body fallies with that of Permann, who was small in stature, smooth shaven and a triffe alleged kidnaping by officers here, to be returned to Los Angeles to answer to a charge of embezslement, depends on a telegraphic conference now going on between his attorneys in the two cities. Attorney Charles A. Petrain, who represented Smith here, and who calls his sudden taking away a plain case of kidnaping, has telegraphed the facts in the case and will take action as instructed.

All of Smith's effects were left behind when he was snatched up by a California state agent at Fourth and Coak streets Wedineaday night on a warrant issued after the beginning of habeas corpus proceedings. By a co-lincidence, the act took place on the same day that Detectives Mallet and Moloney pleaded guilty to a charge of contempt for doing almost the same thing in the case of a Colorado prisoner a few weeks ago.

Smith, who first attracted attention by a maniscal outbreak in a hotel, is wanted at Los Angeles for an alleged failure to account for the funds of Nellie Bell, a widow with whom he appears to be infatuated. He dechares his willingness to return at his own expense, but asked for a writ of habeas corpus because he was tired of waiting in jail for an officer to come after him.
