BIG PAINT FIRM TO BUILD

D. H. Strowbridge Announces Structure Will Cost $40,000. D. H. Strowbridge, of the Strowbridge Hardware & Paint Company, announces that the firm will erect a two-story concrete and brick building on its ground on Grand avenue and East Washington street. About a year ago the firm purchased this property, which consists of 50-foot frontage on Grand avenue and 50-foot on East Washington street. The tract forms an "L" on Grand avenue and East Washington, the East Side Bank building being in the center on the corner. The old frame buildings, which have stood on Grand avenue and East Washington street for more than 40 years, are being torn down preparatory to the erection of the new modern structure. The plans have not been drawn, but Mr. Strowbridge said that the structure will cover the entire ground, and will be fireproof. The cost of the new building will be from $30,000 to $40,000.

OLD BELIEF DISPELLED

AFTERMATH OF SPORTSMEN'S MEETING IS INTERESTING. Dispersion of Idea That English Pheasant Loses Life by "Balling" of Tail Feathers Is Heard. The annual session of the state's leading nimrods and anglers at the Imperial Hotel session of the Fish and Game Commission, Monday, brought out many an interesting point and not least on the subject of the dispersion of the idea that the English pheasant loses its life by the "balling" of its tail feathers in heavy snowfall or sleet. "Nine out of ten sportsmen hold this view," declared Eugene M. Simpson, superintendent of the state game farm. "But it is not true. The pheasant has been provided by nature with a protection against this danger, for whenever the bird's tail feathers get so badly weighted down as to prevent flight, the feathers very automatically pull out. One gentleman told me he saw a pheasant with tail frozen solid to a tree trunk," added Mr. Simpson. "He opined that the bird had starved to death. Just another case of misguided imagination. Tail feathers grow again in about two months." Mr. Simpson, with Senator L. E. Bean, of Eugene; George Putnam, of Medford; C. G. Sutherland, of Portland; and others, gave interesting talks at the sportsmen's banquet. C. K. Cranston, president of the Fish and Game Commission, declared that ten times as many fish annually perish by getting in the irrigation ditches as caught by the anglers. The commission is trying to work out some solution of this vexatious question. The commission is also on the trail of the theorist for it plans to procure settings of all the native game birds and have Superintendent Simpson, of the game farm, attempt to raise them in captivity. George H. Kelly, a member of the commission, is an ardent booster for the rest lakes. "Put yourself in the duck's place," pointed out Mr. Kelly. "How would you like to walk down Washington street and have some one come up behind you and kick you, then turn down a side street and have some one kick you; then up Alder and have somebody else take a whale at you? Wouldn't hang around that neighborhood long, would you, unless you had some place in which to recuperate between kicks?" "So much narrow sightedness among the duck shooters," said Oliver K. Jeffery, well-known realty man, commenting on the wide variance in opinion as to the harmlessness of laws, etc. "The non-preserve hunters shouldn't lose sight of the fact, however, that the preserve keepers are the men who really make duck shooting possible, for by digging down in their jeans they furnish the food that attracts the fowl to this section." The non-preserve wailer who belittles feeding of the ducks, comes in for a torrid verbal touch from A. L. Millis, president of the First National Bank and an enthusiastic scattergun expert. "It is charged that the game hogs keep the ducks away from the ordinary hunters by feeding them on their preserves," expounded Mr. Millis. "Now, before the planting of carp into our streams there was plenty of natural food, but the carp have destroyed it all and were it not for the feeding,

ELDER WOOD GETS AWAY

Prisoner Stabs Four Men Injured With Opium Needle. Two Detectives and "Trusties" Are Injured With Opium Needle. With a needle, such as Chinese use to dig out their opium pipes, an instrument about six inches long and very sharp, Harry Johnson, a prisoner at the City Jail, ran amuck yesterday morning and stabbed four persons before he was overpowered. It was his third attempt to escape from the jail. The wounds inflicted were not serious. Johnson is serving 90 days. He is believed to be somewhat demented. Yesterday morning when the prisoners brought in overnight were being turned out for inspection by the detectives, Johnson watched his chance and came rushing toward the outer door, overturning Jailer Branch and Detective Flack on his way. Detective Captain Baty grappled with the prisoner and Detective Moloney rushed to his assistance. As Baty laid hands on the man, he raised his hand and struck with the needle. Baty's coat was punctured and the point of the weapon just entered the skin. Moloney took a hand in the fray and received a similar wound. It developed that Johnson had turned his needle upon two "trusties" in the corridor, inflicting a severe scratch on one of them. He was placed in a cell.

SON IN JAIL RECEIVES DISPATCH FROM SEATTLE.

Prisoner's Brother Is Arrested Accused of Perjury in Connection With Marriage License. Though the Seattle police were asked last Monday night to look for DeRome Wood, the elderly music teacher accused of crimes against a number of young girls, he had not been caught last night and it is thought that he has passed on to some other place. The news that he was in Seattle came through a telegram sent by Wood to his son William, who was arrested for marrying a 14-year-old girl at his father's instance. William Wood was arraigned in Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of taking a minor child away from her home. At the same time his brother, Darwin Wood, who acts as his witness when he obtained the license to marry the girl, was charged with perjury. Both cases will go direct to the grand jury. Darwin Wood admits that he acted with full knowledge of the facts and says he did so to save his father.
