It was generally understood that the District Attorney would ask for a dismissal of the case, believing that there was little likeli-hood of obtaining a conviction, because of insufficiency of evidence.

CONNAUGHT IN WALL STREET

Bulls and Bears Halt Business to Greet Royal Party.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.-Three members of the reigning house of England-the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia—visited the Wall-street district today. Where money kings come and go daily without ado, their royal highnesses found the way shoked with admiring, cheering Ambassador Reid took the party in sutemobiles down the Wall-street "can-yon" and they were met at the Stock Exchange by President Thomas. A crowd of nearly 3000 persons gathered. Business was stopped for more than ten minutes.

From the Exchange, the visitors were whirled up town for a visit to the Mills Hotel, to see the homes of hundreds of persons of small means erected by the late D. O. Mills, father-in-law of Am-bussador Reid.

A luncheon at the Fifth-avenue residence of Mrs. Cornellus Vanderbilt, Jr., was the chief feature of the afternoon and the party was entertained tonight by Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills at a dinner and musicale. Sixty persons at-tended the dinner and more than 200 more came later for the musicale. The Duke will leave for Washington tomorrow afternoon. In his absence the Duchess and Princess will attend the opera here tomorrow night.

ACTS BRING SUSPICION

(Continued From First Page.) Could he successfully explain away his inconsistency in switching from an ultra anti-Bryan man to a radical who has absorbed all of Bryanism, and in some respects gone Bryan one better? Could be convince the people generally that he is sincere in his professions today when they discover that these professions are the direct opposite of his beliefs and creeds of five and ten years ago when he was not thought of in connection with the Presidency? Is the country now viewing Wilson in his true light, or is he merely taking a posttion that he hopes will prove popular, only to return to his former views in the event of his election?

Woodrow Wilson is a much suspected man among Democrats today, due not to anything said or done by his rivals, but solely to his own words and deeds. Unquestionably he has lost ground in the past ten days or two weeks; the tide is setting away from him; not towards him. If he cannot check the deflection; if he cannot do something to restore confidence, he will fall from his suddenly-achieved prominence, and go to the Baltimore convention leading a small faction. Wilson's fate seemingly is in his own hands. He must redeem himself, if he is to be redemed.

G. Goshn, Merchant, Alleged to Have Stolen Mrs. Lottle Hills' Affections--Litigation Tangled.

CENTRALIA, Wash., Jan. 24 .- (Spe cial.)—A $10,000 damage suit was filed in the Lewis County Superior Court yesterday against G. Gosha, a merchant of Mayfield, for the alleged alienation of the affections of Mrs. Lottle Hill, wife of George Hill, a hotelkeeper at Mayfield. Hill is the complainant. The suit comes as a climax of a long line of suits and complaints in which the Hill family and Goshn have been implicated. Four months ago Mrs. Hill sued her husband for divorce, but the case had an amicable settlement before it came to a hearing.

Later Mrs. Hill again asked for a divorce and a division of the property.
Then Hill filed information against Goshn, who was a roomer at the hotel, and asked that he be ejected.

Goshn retaliated by suing Hill in the justice court at Mayfield to force payment on a bill of goods purchased by Hill. A judgment of $61 was rendered, but Hill appealed the case to the Superior Court.

HARBOR PROJECT TO BE CONSIDERED

Hawley to Press Claims of Tillamook Bay if Big Bill Is Framed.

MODIFIED PLAN APPROVED

Willingness of Community to Bear Share of Cost Regarded as Evidence of Faith in Large Commerce in Future.

OREGONIAN NEWS BUREAU, Washington, Jan. 24—If a river and harbor bill is framed this session, Representative Hawley will endeavor to secure the adoption of a provision approving the new Tillamook Bay project and appropriating $200,000 to begin construction, as has been recommended by the Army Engineers and Secretary of War. The approved project calls for a total expenditure of $314,000, half of which is to be borne by the Federal Government and half by the local community, so that if Congress appropriates $200,000 this session, an additional appropriation next year of $207,000 will meet the Government's obligation, and the other $407,000 will be raised by the Port of Tillamook and the Port of Bay City. Bay City.

The report of the Army Engineers, recommending an $814,000 Tillamook project, has just been printed as a document, and this document shows how close this project came to aban-

Original Project Modified. When the first survey and estimate was made in 1910 the people of Tilla-mook Bay and vicinity were asking for a 20-foot channel across the bar mook Bay and vicinity were asking for a 20-foot channel across the bar at the entrance to the bay, a 15-foot channel to Bay City, and a 14-foot channel to Tillamook City, with a straightening of the channel of Hoquarten Slough. The board, consisting of Colonel John Biddle, Major Jay J. Morrow and Major C. W. Kutz, submitted a plan to carry out these ideas. They found that a north jetty 5700 feet long would cost $558.015; a south fetty 7200 feet long would cost $1.331.680, and dredging and channel work would bring the cost up to $2.-206.006, and that $20,000 would be required annually to maintain the channels within the bay. In submitting these estimates, the board said:

"Much of this work is not essential to the commercial development of Tillamook Bay. It is believed that deep water across the bar and a channel of good depth to some point within the good depth to some point within the bay, reasonably close to the entrance, would provide all necessary facilities for marketing the great lumber re-sources which are tributary to the bay. Further, it is believed that the proposed straightening and deepening of Ho-quarten Slough would not result in benefits commensurate with the cost, as even were this work accomplished mills for lumber manufacture would locate below the slough. The board is locate below the slough. The board is therefore of opinion that it is not advisable for the United States to undertake the improvement of Hoquarten Slough or of the channel between Hoquarten Slough and Bay City, either wholly or partly at the expense of the United States, beyond the scope of the existing project, which provides for a depth of nine feet at high water through these channels."

New Proposal Submitted.

Accordingly the estimates were re-vised, and a project costing $1.744,000 was substituted, contemplating the two jettles, and a limited amount of dredg-Accordingly the estimates were ing. Bay City offered to contribute 200,000 towards this work, but the port of Tillamook held out because it was demanding a deeper channel. The engineers did not believe a deeper druggist and druggist and channel was necessary, and held that the whole thing be held up until the

the whole thing be held up until the ports of Bay City and Tiliamook could reconsider. This was done, and in a report dated June 14, 1911, Major Morrow reported that a new proposition had been received from the interested localities, conditioned upon a further revision of the project. He then said: "It is the belief of this office that the construction of the north jetty, if entirely built within two years from the time of starting, and to the section recommended by the special board, will give quick results and to some extent lasting results on the bar, "and that give quick results and to some extent lasting results on the bar, and that after its completion the necessity for the south jetty will not appear for some considerable period, possibly not until the section is considerably modified by the seas. It is believed that the north jetty should be constructed first."

The matter then was referred to the

The matter then was referred to the River and Harbor Board of Engineers, and under date of August 1, 1911, they made their final report, which has been approved by the Chief of Engineers and Secretary of War. In this report they

"The matter has now taken shape in a proposition presented through and recommended by the district officer, for a partial execution of the project up to Bay City, on the basis of the locality paying one-half of the cost. It is proposed to dredge the channel to Bay City as originally contemplated, and to construct the north jetty only, leaving the question of the necessity for the south jetty to be determined in the fu-ture. The district officer expresses the opinion that one jetty would produce good results, and to some extent last-ing ones, and that the necessity for sion of $12 a month has been awarded to Hannah Kelley, of McMinnville, Or.

the second jetty will not appear for some considerable time. The estimate for the work now proposed is $814,000, of which amount the localities propose to pay one-half. The division engineer concurs in recommending this project, largely on account of the willingness of the locality to contribute liberally toward its cost."

He didn't understand what the odd amount of 50 cents could be for. He paid the bill with a check and asked the expert why he had not made it an even $50. The machinist replied: "I have charged you 50 cents for fixing the thing. The $50 is for know-
