Some time in 1910 I became suspicious that the price paid for the bonds and quoted by Wilde was not correct, nd I decided to make an investigation, I first conferred with S. G. Reed, then president of the German-American Bank, in Portland, and later went to Tacoma and talked over the subject with W. Cooper Morris. In the latter part of August I went to San Diego for the purpose of informing Mr. Wilde what I had learned.

"Prior to this time Wilde had never intimated that the sale of the bonds to the bank was made for any figure greater than 82 cents, neither did he offer to make a further division of the rofits of the transaction with us. I sen told him that I believed the bonds had been sold at a profit of $100,000 and that he had divided $10,000 with his associates in the Construction Company, had given Morris $40,000 and had retained $50,000 for himself.

Deceit Discovered, He Says.

"Wilde appeared excited when I made this assertion, but afterwards smiled and said: 'I thought you knew, but you are only guessing.' which was largely true at that. Finally he told me to go back and talk to Morris. He told me that he would put Morris in jail for the rest of his life if he dared tell me the truth concerning the bond transaction. "Refere our conversation had ended, Wlide showed me a syndicate book which indicated that the telephone bonds had been purchased by Morris for a syndicate including four or five banks. At the same time he showed me two checks on the Oregon Trust & Savings Bank, one for $5000 and the other for $40,000, and admitted that the syndicate had secured the bonds at 90 cents. That is about all there was to the enversation, although some amenities were exchanged which probably will be just as well not to repeat at this time. I spent the evening at Wilde's home and remained there all night." What, after those amenities?" asked Mr. Malarkey.

"Yes, after those amenities, but I did not stay for breakfast, because I thought I had been deceived," replied Stow Is to Be Called Again

Mr. Malarkey gave these witnesses a horough cross-examination and succeeded in bringing out the fact that he records of the bank, as shown by he daily blotters, were carelessly kept. This was particularly true with reference to the daily blotter of Mr. Smith, he paying teller. Various discrepancies a the daily cash balances were pointed by Mr. Malarkey, in one instance his total on Smith's blotter being over 2000 different from another record of he same item kept in the bank. Efforts by the prosecution yesterday to obtain the introduction of testimony showing other alleged questionable bond transactions by Wilde and Morris which commissions were divided ally between them, were temporarily arrested by Judge Kavanaugh on ob-jection of counsel for the defense. The ourt sustained the objection with the understanding that the prosecution later in the trial might raise the question of the admissibility of such testimy for the purpose of proving crimi-

The ruling by Judge Kavanaugh followed a protracted discussion by coun-sel, which was conducted in the absence of the jury. The discussion was started when Mr. Clark was questioning Ralph Morris, witness for the state. Morris was bookkeeper in the Oregon Trust & Savines Bank for two years before its Envings Bank for two years before its savings rank for two years before its suspension and was in charge of the individual ledger accounts which in-cluded the personal deposit and agent accounts of Morris. The witness was asked to identify and describe an entry of $12,500 to the credit of Morris' per-sonal account under date of January 1907, when Mr. Malarkey interposed

"We intend to show by this testi-meny the intimate relations between Morris and Wilde," explained Mr. Fitz-

"Does the item pertain to the charge of embessiement being tried?" inquired Judge Kavanaugh

"We will show by this testimony," said Deputy District Attorney Fitzgerald, "that in December, 1906, Wilds and Morris were engaged in another bond deal when they disposed of bonds for the Puget Sound Telephone Company, from which a commission of $12,-500 was carned. This was later deposited in the Oregon Trust to the credit of Wilde and on the same day, cashed.

Mr. Malarkey insisted that the scope of the prosecution should be limited and confined entirely to proving the charge contained in the indictment on which Wilde was being tried.

"We insist that the testimony is en-tirely relevant," followed Mr. Clark, irely relevant," followed Mr. Clark, "from the fact that we will be able to show that only a few months before the sale by Wilde through Morris to the Oregon Trust of $500,000 of Omaha telephone bonds, Wilde and Morris had concluded a series of similar transactions in bonds, Wilde representing the bondholders' syndicate while Morris acted for the bank. We desire to show the guilty knowledge and guilty intent of the defeadedge and guilty intent of the defend-ants Morris and Wilde in at least one transaction in which under the guise of a commission they embezzled over $12,000 of the funds of the bank, and then divided the money between them.

Minutes Missing Testified.

The state already has introduced the testimony of witnesses to the effect that the record book of the minutes of the meetings of the directors, including the original and only draft of the by-laws, is missing and cannot be found. Later in the day Raiston was recalled by the state, but when ques-tioned by Mr. Clark adhered to his original declaration that the pencil memoranda on the copy of the bylaws he supplied counsel for defense, were made in 1904 at the time the document was delivered to the bank. by the defense when looking through his safe last December. John W. Kelly, a Portland newspaper man, testified to having seen the de-fendant Wilde in San Diego in August, 1910, and that Wilde at the time was making his residence in that city. The purpose of Kelly's testimony, and other witnesses who have been subpensed for the same cause, was to prove the non-residence of Wilde in this state. This fact must be formally established in the trial of the case to validate the indict-ment against Wilde. Had the defendant not removed from Oregon after the alleged embezzlement, the statute of limitations would have run against the

In response to a demand from Mr. Clark for the checks issued against the account of Wilde, as agent, Mr. Malarkey delivered all the canceled checks covering all withdrawals with the exception of a $5000 debit entry of May 7 which, the state contends, was the amount of cash received by Morris in connection with the telephone bends.

Mr. Kuratli testified directly that this account was closed May 10.

Answering further questions from Mr. Malarkey, however, Kuratli said the account might have been closed any time between May 10 and May 27, the date on which the last check against the account was presented and coahed.

The bids submitted were by the Kubli-Miller Company, $1180; by the Kilham Printing & Stationery Company, $1182, and by the Schwab Printing Company, $425. The low bid caused the members of the committee to remark that the "trust" would soon be smarked unless its organization to remark that the "trust" would soon be smashed, unless its organization is put in better condition.

Outsiders' Blds Low. "There is a regular trust, which controls prices in printing in this city," said Mr. Cohen. "I recently had occasion to ask for bids on some work and received bids from five shops. They were all $1260. I then took up the plan of securing bids from outside and the highest bid submitted was $800."

The bid for the Fire Department work was awarded to the Schwab Company.

The question of fixing responsibility for accidents was discussed at some length by the members of the committee and Fire Chief Dowell. The committee decided to order the Chief to instruct his men to take the same action in accident cases as a railroad command does to get all of the acceptance does acceptance action in accident cases as a railroad company does, to get all of the names of witnesses possible, even though the accident may be minor.
