Officers of Beaver Describe Gale Encountered Last Trip.

BIG WAVES COMB STEAMER

Forward Stateroom Windows Shoveled in and Pilot House Slightly Damaged by Huge Roller—Passengers Shun Food.

Admission is made by officers of the steamer "Beaver," flagship of the "Big Three" fleet, that the storm encountered on her last trip to San Francisco was the only "real southerner" she has run into on the coast.

Yet the big coaster bears evidence of having received rough treatment at the hands of Neptune. The scuttle over the forward companionway, sometimes termed the "booby hatch," went over the side and in its place has been built a covering of heavy canvas.

That water found its way into some of the staterooms is accounted for by the officers through the fact the door-locks are low and the water was forced forward the rush of water that broke the windows in the two forward staterooms.

Her big list of passengers was simply represented in the saloon at meal-times and it is said that about half a dozen responded regularly.
