

ROBB AND DOANE SIGN CONTRACTS

McCredie's Ante-Season Troubles About Ended—Beavers Present Strong Front.

DELEGATION OFF MARCH 3

Gregg and Steen Plan to Go on Stage at End of Season—Abe Attell Forced to Extend Self in Match With Kilbane.

BY ROSCOE PAWETT. Two files in the Beavers baseball preserve—Eugene first baseman, and Walter Doane, outfielder—have finally signed their 1912 contracts, and the Portland Coast League family is again serene and content with practically every malcontent within the corral.

Those already signed are: Rapps, Rodgers, McCredie, Bancroft, Coltrin, Lindsay, Peters, Kibbie, Krueger, Chabrousse, Doane, Straft, Mathias, Frise, Howley, LaLonge, Burch, Hyde, and Egan. Those who have not signed are: Koestner, Harkness, Lamline, Hersh, Osborne, Stelger, Disatisfied: Henderson and Greenwell.

From this it will readily be seen that the Portland club is in much better shape than any other Pacific Coast league club, the only one with one or two serious holdouts.

Of the two Portland stars, Henderson will be on hand at the training camp, ready to report to the manager when he will be drawn up, but Greenwell doesn't seem disposed to come West, and may not play ball at all this season. Greenwell will be recalled, suffered a severe gunshot wound while on a hunting expedition last fall. Rapps' agreement will be turned in to the manager by train on Sunday, March 3, at San Francisco, where the Portland delegation, Speck, Harkness, Bill Evans and newspapermen, will lay over for a day or two before proceeding to Santa Maria, the Spring training camp. Active work will then begin, for all the men have been in the States since there by March 5. W. W. McCredie, president of the Portland club, will remain in the city to supervise the construction of the new plant at Twenty-fourth and Vaughn.

Bill Steen is going upon the stage. Nor will the Portland pitcher make his debut alone, for Van Gregg, the great Nap southpaw, will be the other half of a "rube" team which will play the American flag in the twilight next fall after baseball season. Bill's plans depend in a great measure on his success with the Cleveland American League during 1911, but he has great hopes of making good under Harry Davis and his chief concern hinges about the "holdout" habits of his prospective employer in the theatrical warpath, Gregar.

When the two hurlers were on the same Portland payroll in 1910, they made the big money, but Steen and Gregg were their primeval vaudeville, and Steen figures they might better retire from the arena with a bankroll than to go along in the same old way until the day when their dollar-earning ability will be reduced to the minimum.

Abe Attell recently boasted that he won his first 75 fights via the knockout route, but is now content to win on points. No quotations or amplifications from Abe's press agent are necessary, for he is too familiar with his innumerable "pulled" bouts even to elevate the eyebrows. Abe is one of the original business men of the ring, and he is now a dollar-earning champion.

But, while Abe figures close to the dollar, there will be no stalling in the match with Johnny Kilbane, on Thursday afternoon at Los Angeles. On December 11, 1909, Attell "pulled" a fight with Ad Wolgast, 10 rounds, at Naud Junction, and the hungry wolves who lounge over the bar at Naud Junction, and the vestigial of mendicant and prodigal alike, fell upon him like man-eating tigers in a Caylon jungle. For two rounds Abe made the setting as good as Wolgast, then the tripping youngster, and after that "load" him for future use, but the publicity given his efforts have prevented Abe from ever being a champion.

Attell knows full well that he will have to do his best in Los Angeles on Thursday. He has appeared 10 times in the made in Portland, but there are there are but two instances of alleged dishonesty on the part of the 122-pound champion.

"Dutch" Altman, former Oakland and Spokane infielder, is the "unknown" third sacker for whom Danny Long of the Portland Coast League is looking for the past week. So it appears from a Philadelphia dispatch that Connie Mack had asked waivers upon Altman, purchases from Memphis, to be turned over to the Portland club.

Altman went to Memphis in 1910 and played great ball for the Southern league, but last season he was traded to Memphis, then tried to dispose of him, but several other clubs refused to waive and the "take" sale to Philadelphia was put through as a result. It is supposed that Mack worked, but Walter McCredie doesn't think Altman is worth the trouble.

BERG'S OPPONENT DUE TODAY
Mystery Surrounding "Cyclone" Frankenstein Not Cleared.

"Cyclone" Frankenstein, the great unknown who will do battle with John Berg on February 23, is to reach Portland today from Salt Lake to begin active training for his match with the light heavyweight championship claimant.

Who he is or from whence comes the 220 side bet is proving somewhat of a puzzle to the Portland fans, and Berg confided to his friends yesterday that he had a hunch and had sent East for photographs of one or two men who he figured might come out under assumed names for a chance at some easy money.

The mystery surrounding the identity of the invader recalls to mind a prospect dethroned by a bitter enemy of Peter Szuzok seven or eight months ago. The conspirators had planned on bringing Walter Miller, the St. Paul water-weight champion, to the Coast and stationing him in some small town near Portland under another name, whence he would be available for a clean sweep over the Portland club, but Eddie O'Connell came along about the time the scheme was well under way and spotted Szuzok as a golden goose by tossing him at the ring.

The Berg-Frankenstein match will be staged at the Bungalow Theater and the promoters are drawing up a programme of good preliminaries to the main event.

2 NEW LEAGUES NOT OUTLAWS

Hermann Says Majors May Sell Players to Organizations.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 19.—Augustus Hermann, chairman of the National Baseball Commission, said today that organized baseball was not hostile to the newly-formed Columbian and United States Leagues.

"The two leagues are not outlaws," he said. "They are independent bodies within their rights and not trespassing on ours. We have no right to object to them and no license to annoy them. The status of the two leagues is exactly similar, so far as organized baseball is concerned."

"If I had a player for whom I had no room and all the big league clubs wanted claim on him, I would not hesitate to turn him over to either league. Any National agreement team has a perfect right to dispose of its contracts to any organization not in the outlaw class."

ATHLETIC AMITY URGED

OREGON U. EDITOR WOULD HAVE VARSITY PLAY O. A. C.

Present Attitude Foolish, He Says, and Expectation of Apology From Either Side is Futile.

R. Burns Powell, editor-in-chief of the Oregon Emerald, the official university paper, has come out with a plea for a resumption of athletic relations between the State University and the Oregon Agricultural College.

"A resumption of athletic relations is a good thing," he says. "No one thinks the two institutions will go on indefinitely as at present, and it is absurd to expect either school to apologize for its part in the unfortunate fracas. In the meantime we are standing about like a lot of kids, letting our graduate managers worry over finances, our athletes tear their hair in efforts to produce college spirit over games with institutions located 400 miles away, and the public laughs at us over the childishness of our ways."

New Bills Open at the Vaudeville Houses

ALTHOUGH not billed as the leading part of the week's programme, the greatest hit at Pantages seems to be a monologist, Fred Wyckoff, the "Mayor of Tank Town." Jokes come thick and fast that the audience is kept three or four jokes behind the laughter. The only part of the act anything like the usual run of "rube" monologues is the "rube" who says as all his jokes and ditties are fresh from the joke smithy.

Two short sketches and athletic acts especially good. The five Micksels athletes, are particularly worthy. The other gymnastic act is entitled "Fun in a Swimming Pool," and is put on by three Emerson brothers. Although no real diving is done, the stars, various dives and plunges are made from a spring-board, the divers usually landing in the hands of one of the other boys.

The first sketch is built around mistaken identity. By a strange coincidence, two persons, each trying to escape the other, meet on board ship. The scenery is a reproduction of a steamer, of which a midship section suddenly disappears, showing the interior where the amusing incident is enacted. Irene H. Goray appears as the widow and Tom Kyle as the bachelor.

The second sketch is entitled "The Lunatic and the Prima Donna." The character work and singing introduced make this about as good as anything on the bill. Bertha Yeoman as the prima donna, sings a number of selections which tickled the audience. D. L. McGrath, as the lunatic, carries the comedy side of the sketch to perfection. Eugene and Raymond cross a variety of jokes and sing in a well-balanced act. Moving pictures and music finish the bill.

Empress.

T week at the Empress this players in their musical sketch, "A Touch of High Life." There is not much plot to the playlet. What there is concerns a prima donna, who visits a New York cafe in the hope of meeting a stage manager and getting an engagement. She mistakes Jack Flanigan, a ward-heeler, who happens to be in the cafe at the time, for the stage manager, and proceeds to impress him, and to be impressed by her singing, which not only captivates Flanigan, but incidentally all the waiters. The prima donna proposes to pay for the dinner and the waiter, assuming that the stage manager will wish to pay, but Flanigan, who has only 50 cents, fails to make good. She, it seems, had left her money in the safe, so everybody is embarrassed, until the real stage manager arrives, then everybody is happy. The song numbers are all melodious and the singing is a delight. Miss Francis has a voice of unusual quality, and her method is excellent. She is extremely pretty and has much charm.

The Empress Chorus, a small edition of a pony show, is an act that will not fail to please children and all lovers of animals. The tricks of the ponies and mule are most amusing. Gertrude Holmes and Robert Buchanan give a pleasing musical act called "The Girl of 1847." Both have excellent voices, and their songs, contrasting the bygone days with the strenuous ous present, are filled with pretty sentiment. The three Keltons give a musical ensemble with xylophone, cornet and trombone. Miss Gladys Kelton displays much skill in her rendition of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 10. The Fireman and Foreman. Their songs are good and their patter full of wit. Cadieux, a wirewalker, gives thrilling feats in that line, his most daring accomplishment being a complete somersault in the wire. Moving pictures of Genoa, Italy, complete an entertaining programme.

Orpheum. MORE than making amendments for what it offered last week in the name of entertainment, the present Orpheum bill puts over at least one-half a dozen new numbers. Any bill that Valerie Bergere heads is sure of at least one good act—here she returns this season with a strongly dramatic sketch, "Judgment," which affords her unlimited opportunity to display her splendid emotional ability. It's a story—rapidly told—of the uncertainty of hasty judgment, and particularly of circumstantial evidence. The denouement of the sketch is its big feature—hence any review of the story itself would spoil it for those who have yet to enjoy it.

Naturally, Miss Bergere has the principal role, that of a wife of a thief, condemned on circumstantial evidence of murder, but she is a most capable actress, and offends not with an overmuch tearing of the emotions, but rather plays skillfully and with unmisgiving understanding. Herbert Brill, as the judge, is excellent in a small part in Miss Bergere's play. Krans and White are back, singing for the fun of the thing (not). But at least they are singing; all of it new, comedy and tunes. Their big hit yesterday was a "melodramatic rube" which they did in "contumacious" style to display her splendid emotional ability. It's a story—rapidly told—of the uncertainty of hasty judgment, and particularly of circumstantial evidence. The denouement of the sketch is its big feature—hence any review of the story itself would spoil it for those who have yet to enjoy it.
