IN ing play or as a reading drama, since it is replete with the faults of melodrama of its day, when romanticism was in full flower, "Richelieu," rich in high, spiendig thought and beautiful with its touches of humanity, was presented last night at the Hellig, with Robert Mantell in an exquisitely turned-out rendition of the beloved cardinal. The intensely human elements of this play by Bulwer-Lytton are most apparent even when theater-going world, just as much as fairy stories will be listended to by children in spite of broad-minded (?) literalists who would like to efface il-lusions from their baby mental worlds. As long as actors bring Richelieu to the mimicry house, a public will be found to witness the production, for the human mind turns as easily and naturally to the idealistic and roman-tic as does the oft-mentioned flower to Mantell's Interpretation of Richelieu is poetry. He makes a dignified, im-pressive and very human cardinal. Since the present generation is actually interested in seeing this famous play of the past century, it is heartly to be congratulated that Mantell has included it in his repertoire, and plays it so beautifully.

What In the reading form one might interpret as theatricalism on the part of the cardinal, Mantell succeeds in giving as fiery sincerity. His Richelieu is equally imposing in his wrath and fuscinating in his shrawdness and

He is admirably suited to the character because he touches the comedy side quite as effectively as he does its tragedy. Mantell portrays it as a delicate etching and a great personality. Just whether he idealizes considerably, though neither inartistically nor unjustly, the character of the real Richelieu is of no particular moment. Enough that he sives his public a positive pleasure in his enactment of it.

While his support is marked with strength, the other men's parts are played in a way that neither adds to nor detracts from Mantell's work, save as they form a framing for the picture he creates.

Fritz Lieber is of most importance in Mr. Mantell's cast and makes a fiery, passionate Adrian De Mauprat. Miss Keith Wakeman delights the eye and ear as Julie: Alfred Hastings, as Joseph, a Capuchin, affords mirth, and Guy Lindsley gives excellent accounting of the page who learns painfully that "there is no such word as fail."

Most magnificently staged the production was in every way a delight.

Feb. 21.—Earth sildes totalling nearly 1.000,000 cubic yards have interfered with operations in the Culebra Cut section of the Panama Canal, according to mail dispatches received here today from Colon. Cracks in the earth indicate another silde, which may assume more alarming proportions.

The letter says the first silde in the east bank was of about 250,000 cubic yards, tearing away a big section of the $5$-foot road and closing a portion of the drainage ditch. This silde, it continues, will necessitate the rolocation and regrading of all railroad tracks in the vicinity of the Pioneer Cut. The earth is cracked in the vicinity of this silde and canal workers are alarmed over the probability of another great earth "silp."

The second silde, on the west bank, was on the site of the great silde of two years ago. Canal workers say it has "become extensive again," approximately 750,000 cubic yards having airendy gone in and the end is not believed to be in sight.
