Stockholder in Textile Plant Ashamed of Co-Owners.

AGENT HERE, TELLS OF WOE

J. T. Carmichael, holder of securities at Lawrence, visits Portland and describes misery of woolen factory employees.

Although he is a stockholder in one of the large woolen mills at Lawrence, Mass., the employee of which are on a strike that has attracted the attention of the Nation, James R. Carmichael, sales agent for a large New York drapery house, now in Portland, said yesterday that the living conditions of the men, women and children employed in the textile mills were deplorable and that the strikers were entirely justified in their wage demands.

"I have been receiving 7 per cent dividends on my investment," said Mr. Carmichael at the Times Club yesterday, "but I would be willing to accept a reduction to give those poor people enough wages so that they could live decently. I don't say comfortably, but I would be willing to live decently, which many of them can't afford to do now."

"Lawrence is a town more than two centuries old, but it has a population of only 75,000 people. It has had nearly that many for 25 years, its only advancement being in the natural increase due to the birth rate. The city is not progressive. Its business buildings remain the same as they were many years ago and its residence houses are growing even worse. The people who live in tenements, which are stuck into the air, from seven to 10 stories high.

"Children live in basements. From 50 to 100 persons live over the same ground space that is used for a single family here in Portland. Thousands of children live in basements. Many of these basements are damp, poorly ventilated and perpetually dark.

"Little boys are forced to work in the mills when they are less than 12 years old. They receive from $2.50 to $3.50 a week. The men are paid only $9 to $10.50 a week. So-called experts, or loom fixers, get about $15 a week and are able to live in comparative luxury. People cannot, unless they go there, own comfortable homes. They realize what awful conditions those mill workers have to contend with. People in factory towns of the East in which the situation is similar can appreciate the fact that the Lawrence mill workers are making, but people here in Portland, where nearly every family lives in its own comfortable home and where the average wage is more than twice that paid in Lawrence, simply can't comprehend it.

WEST CHAFES AT DELAY

Holding Up Lieu Land School Claims by Interior Department Angers.

SALEM, Or., March 6.—(Special.)—Retention of lieu land school indemnity claims of the State of Oregon, which are being held up in wholesale manner by the Interior Department, will call for a strong letter to the department from Governor West, tomorrow, demanding that immediate action be taken to see that the Oregon selections are approved at an early date.

"The executive has just received a communication from Assistant Commissioner Proutt, of Washington, in which it is said that under departmental order of January 11, 1912, all indemnity school land selection lists were suspended, pending examinations in the field as to their mineral character and power site and irrigation possibilities.

HOOD RIVER MAY GET MILL

Eastern Capital Investigating Proposition in Oregon.

HOOD RIVER, Or., March 6.—(Special.)—W. H. Goodenough, formerly manager of a large paper mill in Wisconsin, who is now an orchardist here, said last night in addressing the citizens of the city at the Commercial Club that he has found no place in the West more suited for a paper mill than Hood River.

"I have visited a number of places since I came to the Pacific Coast, just to look for paper-mill sites, and I have seen no locality that can offer better natural facilities than Hood River, with its abundance of pure water and easily developed water power," he said.

Mr. Goodenough has been in the paper manufacturing industry all of his life. One of his sons is now manager of the Aetna Paper Mills. He established the first paper mill outside of the New England states.

A large crowd was present to listen to Mr. Goodenough and a concerted effort will be made to secure a paper mill for Hood River County.

rence without any explanation of where they were going or whether their parents consented.

"Law Thought Violated."
"Where did you take them?"
"To the police station."
"Why?"
"Because they had, in my opinion, violated the laws of Massachusetts."

"The law of providing for the care of neglected children."
"How did you know they were neglected?"
"The situation was extraordinary. These people would not tell us who they were, and for that reason they were detained."

"We if some of these women were mothers of those children, what right did you have to arrest them?"
"The right, as I have told you, that I thought it was my duty under the law."
"When did you discover that any of these women were mothers?"
"Extreme Poverty Denied."
"Not until after they were taken to the state institution, where they were cared for later that day. That night some of the fathers came and acknowledged parentage of the children. They promised to bring them into court on Tuesday and were allowed to take them home."

"Did you have any written authority to take these women and children?"
"I did not," he said.
"Captain Sullivan said he had seen more poorly dressed than he had ever seen on the streets of Lawrence."
"As to the testimony that they eat meat once a week," he said, "I know there are scores of Italian and Jewish meat and peddlers who sell to no one but these people. They also have their own clothing shops, which are well patronized."

"Suffering People Left."
Mr. Holman outlined the efforts made by the Governor to settle the strike and the withdrawal from Lawrence of most of the troops.
"No undue violence was used by the strikers in Lawrence," he said, "but it was necessary at times where the suffering people were ugly and had to be restrained."
"The police state authorities or soldiers had anything to do with stopping the departure of children from Lawrence?"
"The police alone dealt with that situation," he said.

"Call for Mercy Unheeded."
"As to the arrest of women," continued the Captain, "I want to say that not one-half of the women who should have been arrested were. The women arrested were invited to violence by their leaders. I know of a Syrian doctor in Lawrence who had no connection with the strike, who asked for 25 men to go with him to arrest themselves on the bayonets of the soldiers to arouse sympathy for the cause."

"The trouble started over a letter which Mr. Broad wrote to the Council stating that if he were given a chance to bid he could beat by several thousand dollars the estimate of $214,000. Broad declared the men who were working for the city would quit and go over to him."
"Do you want me to tell you why

"North Dakota, at a Presidential primary on March 15, will elect a solid La Follette delegation to the Chicago convention. There is no doubt of this. President Taft will run stronger than generally supposed, but La Follette will win hands down. Moreover, as told by Senator Crawford that South Dakota also will be for La Follette. The harvest issue will have much to do in swinging these states to La Follette."

Senator Gronna said he had letters from Minnesota and California advising him that a strong tide has set in towards La Follette and that prospects were bright that La Follette would have delegates from those states as well.

The Heart of a Business

ADVERTISING is the heart of a business. If a business is not advertised it is safe to assume that that business has no heart. Surely if it is said to have a heart it must have that heart divided up into several departments. But the business that is advertised lives and grows and prospers because it has a whole heart that is everlastingly beating and pulsing good red blood through the whole organization.
