Portland Theater Managers All Will See Play.

BURLESQUE IS RECALLED

Men Who Took Part in "Late Lamented" Production at First Annual Follies Would Sec Roles Acted - Again.

A most unusual thing will happen at the Paker Theater temorrow night at the performance of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Every theater manager in the Cabin." Every theater manager in the city belonging to the Managers' As-sociation has bought outright a box for the performance and will attend with his family,

This is partially as a compliment to Manager Baker, but an ulterior motive has been scented from the fact that about six weeks ago these same managers appeared in a short travesty of the play written by John W. Kelly, and, though they were unmercifully "roasted" by every critic in the city (includ-ing Kelly himself), it is said they got the Benuine acting "bug" strong, and each one has a feeling that the general scoring they got as thespians was not meant for himself. It has also been suggested that this feeling of vanity has been coaxed along by the critics themselves, who whispered into the ears of each one separately that he was the only one who showed real talent, but it would not have been wise to have singled him out for praise when the other wars as had when the others were so bad.

Baker's Interpretation Remembered. Baker's Interpretation Remembered. The travesty was given at the well-remembered First Annual Follies given by the Managers' Association and George-Baker's Little Eva iong will be remembered as one of the best gems of poetic acting seen on a Portland stage in years. Frank Coffinberry also gave a most pathetic portrayal of Uncle Tom, and anyone watching him Tuesday night may detect glances of Uncle Tom, and anyone watching him Tuesday night may detect glances of approval mingled with envy during the scenes when William Dills is on the stage in the role. Manager Johnson, of Pantages, of course will be sizing up the Simon Legree of Frank Burke, while Charley Ryan looks askance at the auctioneer. John Cordray probably will weep when he sees Walter Gilbert riding a real donkey in the part of Marks the lawyer. He will recall how the one the property man hired for him that night at the Follies balked and absolutely refused to go on, thereby absolutely refused to go on, thereby spolling his sensational entrance. Larry Keating is sure that he was as funny a Topsy as Margaret Marriott ever tried to be and only will laugh at her from a feeling of good fellow-ship, while Dan Flood as Ophelia and ship, while Dan Flood as Opnelia and Milton Seaman as Fletcher, as well as William Pangle, who played St. Clair, also will be there to see if there was much difference between the way these characters are portrayed by recognized actors and actresses, and the way they played them. It no doubt would be played them. It no doubt would be hard to get them to say in so many words, for they have always been known to be extremely considerate of other people's feelings.

What Is the Reason!

Caivin Heilig doesn't pretend that he took the character of Eliza seriously, but hose who are close to him tell a different story. However that may be it will be an event that has not happened before in Portland theatricals to have every manager in the city at a performance, and paying for their own seats. Can it be vanity, or curiosity, or what?

GAME WARDEN IS UPHELD

Albany Man Loses Suit for Confiscation of Deer Meat.

E. S. Cattren, of the State Game Warden's department, returned yester. day from Albany, where he went to represent his office in the suit of George W. Fisher against the State of Oregon for damages for confiscation of deer meat and hides by the Game War-den in 1907. The case was tried before Judge Keily and the jury returned a verdict against the plaintiff on the ground that he had failed to show that the deer seized had been killed in open

The Fisher case has been brought to public attention on several occasions by reason of the peculiar circumstances connected with it. Fisher was first tried on a charge of having deer meat and hides in his possession in the closed season. He was found guilty, but the case was reversed by the Supreme Court on the ground that Fisher had not been permitted to show that the deer had been killed in open season. Before the case could be retried, the Legislature repealed the law under which Fisher had been convicted and which Fisher had been convicted, and the case was nullified.

Fisher thereupon sued the State of Oregon for confiscation of the deer meat. At the trial, which was fon-cluded in Albany yesterday, I. H. Van Winkle, Assistant Attorney-General, ap. peared in behalf of the Game Warden's department. In the previous trials Fisher had contended that the deer Fisher had contended that the had been killed in the last week of the open season. The game department offered evidence that the car-casses when selzed, some time after the season closed, showed they had been freshly killed.
