Dr. Bolivar J. Lloyd, surgeon of the United States Public Health and Ma-rine Hospital Service at this port, res-terday confirmed the above statement and said that of the number detained and later discharged as cured, treat-ment extending from two to six weeks was required.

"Warm climates are much more favorable for the development of the hockworm than cold," said Dr. Lloyd, "and it is only when the alvine dis-charges of an infected person come in contact with the skin that infection can take place. Pear Production Increases. The production of pears is gradually increasing. The last season was not a favorable one for pears, as the produc-tion everywhere was large. However, we were able to net our growers $1.15 for Bartletts, $1.75 for d'Anjous, $1.17 for Winter Nells. Our d'Anjous rank high in the market, and we think if they are grown extensively will rank with the Southern Oregon d'Anjous.
