Attorney-General Responds to Resolution of Canal Commission,

It has been contended in the past that under an old act the state is entitled to $200,000 for the school fund, providing the locks are bought by the state. The Attorney-General took the position some time ago that the state will be entitled to that amount of money under a Supreme Court decision, in his judgment, but says he believes it would be better to adjust the difficulty before the money is paid, rather than make an effort to recollect the money. men of the organization upon the sublect of the "Oregon Made" movement.

The Army officers are usually paid off on the first of the month and Captain Bishop may have believed that he would have may have believed that he would have enough to make the check good when he drew it. SALEM, Or., April 18.—(Special.)—
Attorney-General Crawford, in responding jesterday to a resolution of the Canal Commission, calling upon him to take action toward protecting the state's equity in the locks at Oregon City, made a suggestion that adjustment of the question be made before the state pays $200,000 toward the locks and in making this suggestion it is apparent that another heated discussion may arise.

It has been contended in the past that under an old act the state is entitled to $200,000 for the school fund, providing the locks are bought by the state. The Attorney-General took the position some time ago that the state will be entitled to that amount of money under a Supreme Court decision.

BOWMAN MOBBED.

Call for Help Gets Action.

Bowman called for help to carry away at bargain prices the entire stock of his Fifth and Aider-street store and he had to get busy in real earnest all day yesterday. Bowman's reputation for doing things right called out a crowd of eager shoppers that mobbed his store from dawn until dark. Bowman has to move in such a short space of time that he doesn't care what he sells his stock for; for example: all wool suits worth up to $15 are now going for $5. Corlis Coon collars always priced 15c for 5c; Lenox hats for $2.15, Cashmere hose worth 25c for 12½c, 25c neckwear for 19c and so on through the entire stock. Mr. Bowman asks all his friends in the entire State of Oregon to send in their mail orders and assures them that he will personal-ly supervise the selection of the goods for their order.
