ENCHANTING MUSIC.

'The Perfection of Quartet Playing,' Says a London Daily of the Flonzaleys.

Such infinite variety of tonal beauty as that presented by the Flonssley String Quartet, of European fame, has perhaps never before been evolved in pernaps never before been evolved in music. Each of the four instruments takes up the song, answering one an-other or joining in chorus until the ensemble becomes a web of exquisite music, "enchanting melodies," says one critic, "suggesting nothing so much as the gleam of moonlight on pale, gently the gleam of moonight on pass, gently undulating waters, the ever-changing play of glancing lights, or the sparkle of starbeams as they break athwart the shimmering beauty of the restless

BANK

The prosperous conditions of Port-land that are reflected in the recent bank reports are also thoroughly indi-cated by the great volume of business bank reports are also the relations cated by the great volume of business and the many very costly planes that are sold newadays by Ellers Music House. Twelve years age Portland's home plane concern, which even then was recognized as a big institution, sold only two planes costing more than $1000 during an entire year. Yesterday, as announced on page 7 of The Oregonian under the heading "Many Homes Get Costly Planes," the fine new establishment at the corner of Seventh and Alder sold three planes which alone amounted to $2700, an average of $1232 each, and the total day's business to nearly $8000. No better proof of Portland's, buying power and appreciation of the beat could possibly be demanded.
