WALTER LAW, Fritz Macklyn and W Miss Tronne Marvin, in the play-let "At the Threshold," are sharing honors at the Empress Theater this week with "Peppino," the accordeoniat: Landry Brothers, athletos, and the trained pony, dogs and monkeys of Monsieur Del Franco. Mr. Law plays the part of a bur-glar, who enters the mansion of Mr. Harrison at midnight, discovering Mrs. Harrison at midnight, discovering Mrs.

Harrison at midnight, discovering Mra. Harrison and her paramour about to elope. Taking in the situation, be tells the story of his own wrecked life. His beautiful wife had been lured away by wealth. 'I found them there in Bom-bay," says the burgiar, "this rich Amer-ican and his beautiful wife. Nay, not his wife. I left his bones with the vultures outside the city walls. And she-she died in my arms in Bombay," "My mother died in Bombay," re-sponds Mrs. Harrison, after the would-be home-wrecker has left. This dec-laration, the sudden meeting of father and daughter, work a reformation in and daughter, work a reformation in England; the Lawrence strikers shipping their children to New York: the reunion of the "Yamps," the survivors of New York's volunteer fire department; President Taft's visit with Masonic friends to the tomb of Wash-ington, and the latest creation in Spring fashions in Paris.

Orpheum.

Orpheum. A REGLAR musical comedy show is in progress at the Orpheum this week - a ratiling good bill, too. There's the chorus and there hasn't been a musical show in Portland in a siege of hus meens that has offered any pret-tier dancers. Every one of the Sun-shine Girls deserves this appellation. There's a round dozen of them, all young in years and attractive of face and figure. The show, as an entirety, has the effect of specialties with the chorus coming on occasionally, just as in the bigger shows. First the big programme opens with the Lelands, who paint the inevitable snow storm to sleighbell accompaniment and two others, marines, that lack only gill frames to be faithful to parlor art. The best thing about their work is lis right word. Coogan and Parks, one of whom looks like a cross between Rich-ard Carle in his leanest hour and Icha-bod Crane, have a dan-ing and singing merrily. Then in dashes the chorus.

Then in dashes the chorus Colorful clothes, cheerful airs and the Colorful clothes, cheerful airs and the best-trained 34 feet that have pirou-eited on the Orpheum stage in several days. Off they go after a generous reply to applause-and Nadell and Kane, regular howls of joy. Both are surcharged with vivacity, and every line they speak fairly bristles with newness. Honestly, their one act has more clever lines, fresh jokes and jibes than is usually distributed.
