Jeffrey, the Democratic nominee for District Attorney of Multnomah County.

According to Henry Westbrook, attorney for Leve, who went before the grand jury yesterday. Leve declares that it cost them $67, the amount of money found in their possession when arrested, to have the charges dropped.

Grand Jury to Hear Story. Grand Jury to Hear Story.

The grand jury was so busy yesterday that an audience was not given Leve and Seward, but they have been instructed to appear later.

Attorney Westbrook says that Leve's story is that Jeffrey posed as a magistrate and fined the two. Mr. Jeffrey was out of the city yesterday and could not be reached. Constable Weinberger tells the following story of the episodes:

"One morning Mr. Jeffrey called me one morning Mr. Jeffrey called me up and said he represented the Munic-ipal Association and that the associa-tion wanted me to raid a gambling game in a tailor shop. I told him that was a job for the police, but he insist-

There were no cards on the table, but it looked as if they were settling up, as there was $67 cash in sight. I told them to come with me and took them to Jeffrey's office. We decided there was nothing on which they could be held. I went out to serve a paper, leaving them in Jeffrey's office. When I returned we held another conference and Leve and Seward left Jeffrey's office with me. Constable Says He Took Cash.

"Upon reaching the street they told me that Jeffrey had secured $12.50 cash from them and that they were going to pay him another $12.50 in a few days. I told them this payment was foolish, but they said Jeffrey had promised to defend them in the gambling case. Then one of them handed me $20 and insisted that I take it. I did so. This was after I had given them back their money. I realize that it was indistrect of me to take the money, but they insisted."
