Handsome trophies have been secured for the various events, special awards being made to the winners of the men's and women's champions and runners-up. Medals will be awarded for some of the match plays.

REIDY'S JOB IS TEMPORARY

Seal Owners Hunting Good Playing Manager.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 4.—(Special.)—Bill Reidy's appointment as manager of the Seals undoubtedly is only temporary and for no longer period than the current season, if the long With the Seals in such a frightful slump, it was necessary to make a switch of some kind to appease the fickle baseball public, and as Reidy was the best available man, he was given the berth. His position, however, is more like that of a relief pitcher, sent into the emergency.

It is known that the San Francisco club, owned by Frank Ish and Cal Ewing, has been on the hunt for a good playing manager to take charge of the Seals.

It is hard to get a playing manager in mid-season, as Messrs. Ish and Ewing have found out this year. But they will persevere their search and they expect to have an excellent leader, who will also take part in the game, or at least be able to get on the coaching line in uniform, before another Coast League season rolls around.

BERGER WANTS TO BUY SEALS

Ewing Says He Refused $150,000 for San Francisco Franchise.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 4.—Cal Ewing announced on his return from San Diego with Allan Baum today that he had been offered $150,000 by Sam Berger for the San Francisco Coast League Baseball Club. The offer was refused, he said.

Ewing and Baum went to San Diego yesterday with several other interested in the Coast League to consider a proposition of establishing a club at San Diego next season. The San Diegans were told they would have to raise $100,000 first and then secure another $50,000 for an eighth town in the league before the question of granting a franchise would be taken up. There is small chance, it is said, for San Diego to comply with the terms.

Fourteen Errors Mar Game With Washington High School.

MOUNT ANGEL, Or., June 1.—(Special.)—The baseball team of Mount Angel College has a good record to date, having lost only two games this season; one to the Oregon Agricultural College and one to the Chemawa Indian nine. But it has a victory over the Indians and is confident of a win over Oregon Agricultural in the return game to be played here soon.

In the game here last week with the Verboter Beavers, the Collegians took Gnos, the 15-year-old midget wonder, from the junior team and pitted him against the heavy Beaver sluggers. He twirled a four-hit game and fanned 17 of them. Besides this, he was at bat four times, made a hit, received three walks and scored four times. He is being carefully groomed by Coach Ransier, who predicts a great future for him.

(Gross), 5 to 1, second; Thistle Rose, 51 (Hill), 16 to 1, third. Time 1:15.

Second race, selling, six furlongs, three-year-olds and upward—Cantem, 106 (Anderson), 16 to 1, won; Clint Tucker, 107 (Burlingame), 5 to 1, second; Beatrice Soule, 102 (J. McIntyre), 30 to 1, third. Time 1:14 3/4.

OLSON'S STATUS IS MYSTERY

Manager of Naps Says Third Baseman Is Captain; Team Says No.

CLEVELAND, O., June 4.—(Special.)—Whether or not Ivan Olson is captain of the Naps is a mystery. Manager Davis declared he is, but members of the team declare the club has no captain at present and assert Davis will get along without a field leader.

The rumor that Olson might go to Toledo is not believed here as Olson is playing a fairly good game at third base and also batting creditably. Certainly Davis will not let him go until he gets a better man in his place and better men than Olson are not picked up every day. The flare up occasioned by Olson's battle with Pitcher Mitchell seems to have died down. It is but ancient history now.

RIGLER GIVES VIEWS

Agricultural High School Declared to Be Favored.

ELECTIVE SYSTEM UPHELD

City Superintendent at Meeting of Rotary Club Says High Schools Have Been Under College Dominance Too Long.

City School Superintendent Frank Rigler yesterday, at a meeting of the Rotary Club, declared himself friendly to the idea of establishing an agricultural high school and of making high school courses more nearly elective. He declared that the high schools have been too long under the dominance of the colleges in the fixing of their courses, and urged the necessity of courses that would be adapted to the needs of students who are not preparing to enter college, but must go directly from high school into active work.

While he advocated adaptation of the instruction of the high schools to other purposes besides merely fitting a student for entering college, he decried hasty and ill-considered innovations. He reviewed his experiences upon the School Board in the past on occasions when movements were started for the adoption of some pedagogical fad, into the school courses in Portland.

Time and time again members of the Board have been criticized because they refused to adopt some of these fads, and were called unprogressive and "conservative," simply because they stood out against some theory that any one with a fair knowledge of the psychology of childhood might easily know to be fallacious.

"Education of a child is a matter of growth, and at certain periods in the child's development it would be as futile to attempt to teach it by some of the faddist methods that have been advanced as it would be to try to teach a tadpole to hop before it had sprouted its legs. The children at some stages of their development are simply not equipped to receive the education that the theorist and faddist would have tried upon them."

"All of the present uproar against the School Board is chiefly instigated by a man who has an axe to grind. I won't mention his name. It is not necessary for the most of you know him well. Attacks against the School Board are being made constantly on the grounds of conservatism and non-progressiveness, without any investigation being made as to whether the innovations that are called for could be installed practically."

"The Portland schools always have been in the front ranks of the truly progressive schools, and have been among the first to adopt any innovation that could be proven practical, and not a mere passing fad. They were the pioneer schools in many lines of new endeavor, such as vocational schools, vacation schools for retarded students and public night schools. Those who insist that the Portland schools are not progressive simply do not understand what they are talking about."

R. E. Holman introduced the speaker and presided over the programme part of the meeting. President P. C. Riggs appointed a committee of three, upon motion of C. B. Merrick, which immediately will wait upon Mayor Rushlight and ascertain why the bonds voted last year for the establishment of a municipal system of garbage collection have not been issued and why the system has not yet been put in operation. Mr. Merrick brought the motion at the request of women of several organizations interested in civic welfare.

TRADE SCHOOL EXHIBITS

Specimens of Students' Handiwork Attract Much Interest.

There were many visitors yesterday at the Portland School of Trades, Eleventh and Davis streets, where the annual exhibition of students' work is being held; and many enthusiastic comments were made, on both the quality and quantity of the students' work and on the remarkable growth of the school during the last year.

The exhibit includes electrical construction, tools of many types, cups, vases, patterns of all kinds, furniture, air pumps, automobile fittings, mechanical drawings, plumbing work and many other things, representing a money value of many thousand dollars and an even higher educational and social value.

In the girls' dressmaking department there are excellent displays of tasteful, well-made dresses and other garments of really professional cut and style, and many proud and happy girls to wear them.

The exhibit of practical cookery, including a display of all kinds of bread, rolls, cakes, pies, soups, meats, vegetables and salads, excited much interest.

In the millinery department were "creations" to delight all feminine visitors. During the past season 250 hats have been made in the millinery rooms.

The exhibition will be open to the public tomorrow from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. and from 8 to 10:30 P. M. It is the desire that parents of pupils about to graduate from the grammar grades will take this opportunity of seeing what the Trade School has to offer a boy or girl along lines of practical vocational education. The exhibit also will be open Thursday from 9 A. M. to 3:30 P. M.
