First Episcopal Edifice Ever Built on Pacific Coast Burns in Vancouver. Wash.-Business Section of City Threatened.

VANCOUVER, Wash., June 17.—(Special.)—In a fire that for half an hour threatened the business district of Vanthreatened the business district of Vancouver last night the first Episcopal Church built on the Pacific Cbast, the eldest building in the city, was destroyed. The old landmark was built more than 60 years ago. The life of Mrs. Anna McHale, who for 26 years has owned and lived in the building, was saved by the heroic work of William McCavet and John Hogan, who found her in the burning building looking for a photograph of her son, who died three years ago.

The fire started in the Modern Laundry, about 3:45 o'clock, and ina few

The Government fire department was called out and water was played on the roofs, preventing loss. The Rector & Daly stable, now occupied by a grading camp outfit, was destroyed, but no horses were in the stable.

Mrs. McHale was sitting on her front porch visiting with a neighbor when the fire was discovered. "The first thing I thought about was my dear boy's picture and I went into the house looking for it and for the deed to my property," said Mrs. McHale. "I did not know what I was doing, I guess, but I wanted my boy's picture; it was the only one there was. My hair was scorched, but that doesn't bother me, for we got the picture. I can get a copy of my deed."

"This is the first time in all my life that I have been homeless," continued Mrs. McHale. She has several married children in this city.

The old Episcopal Church, in which Mrs. McHale. Ilved, was built about 1852, as nearly as the old timers here can recall. It was built by direction of Chaplain John McCarthy, who was first Rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church. It also served as a school, and several of the pioneers here, including Mrs. Scheule and Mrs. Robert Downing, Al Thorne and Fred W. Bier, attended school there in the years 1855, 1859 or 1880.

In 1871 a new Episcopal church was built and in this is the altar in which a marbie slab bearing the inscription, "To the memory of Rev. John McCarty, D. D., first rector of St. Luke's Church. Entered into rest May 19, 1881."

Another slab of marble in the front of the church is in memory of Mrs. John McCarty, his wife, who died January 22, 1879.

The laundry building was owned by Mrs. Jerome Smith, and was not insured. Insurance of $300 was carried on machinery in the laundry.

The frame buildings burned like tinder and in less than 45 minutes from the time the fire was discovered all were in ashes. Mr. Harter, working in the laundry, first saw the fire and attempted to telephone, but was burned on the right arm and was forced to on the right arm and was forced to drop the receiver and run. Joseph Nadeau operated the laundry. The fire is supposed to have originated in the boller room.

The Volunteer Fire Department did excellent work. The old frame building is at the west edge of the business district and if the fire had got any headway there would have been grave danger. The feed store of Kelly Bros. adjoining, was slightly damaged and a portion of the grain soaked with water. The loss of Mr. Henderson, which is about $2000, is partly covered by in-turance. The building belongs to the Lawrence estate, the members of which are residents of Portland.

ASHLAND CITIZEN DIES

ASHLAND, Or., June 17 .- (Special.) -William Patterson, a well-known sitizen and Water Commissioner of this sitisen and water Commissioner of this sity for the past 15 years, dropped dead at the family residence here shortly after the noon hour today, presumably from apoplexy. Earlier in the day he was apparently in usual health and attending to his customary duties. The deceased leaves a wife and seven children, Mrs. Patterson and a daughter being in the northern part of the state on a visit to relatives when the sudden summons came.

Mr. Patterson came of a large family of brothers and sisters and had been a resident of Jackson County since 1862. Arrangements for the funeral are pending the arrival of relatives from a distance.

THE SCHOOL CHILD'S DIET Habits of Eating Formed at This Age Have Good Effect.

M. H., in the National Food Magazine.
This is certainly the children's era, and fortunate it is for the child that more and more it is being realized that there is nothing more vital to his physical welfare than the food he eats; not inly this, but what he eats has a most profound effect upon his disposition and character.

Food serves several purposes in the sody; it makes bone and muscle; it makes good the waste which is continuity going on, and furnishes heat and energy, or I might better say it furnishes fuel for heat and energy.

Food must do even more than this for the child, it must also furnish material for growth.

Adults are frequently heard to say.

"That child eats more than I do," and is it strange if he does eat more, for what ie eats must not only supply heat and energy, and repair waste, but must sup-ply material for rapid growth. If he is a healthy child he is in continual motion a healthy child he is in continual motion and every motion requires fuel to produce the energy used in making the motions.

Authorities on the subject say that the period of childhood from 6 to 18 is one of the most critical in the life of the individual. "It is a time of rapid growth and development, both physical and mental; and it is a time when any serious check to the perfect and complete evolution of the functions of the body, may lead to ineradicable mischief, and severely handicap the individual in the subsequent struggle for existence."

existence."

It is a time when close attention must be given to what the child is eating, so that he will not be handleapped in the future struggle; for, alas, many have fallen by the way and have been failures in life, all because of the habits of eating formed at this age.

It must be remembered that the mind keeps on developing long after the body has ceased to grow, and that the period of childhood, and youth is one in which the constitution of the individual is established for the remainder of life and "success in digestion and assimilation is of greater importance than success in mental development." It is more generally being realized that the breaking down in health of school children is due to poor feeding.

Often the appetite is poor in the morning from sleeping in a poorly ventilated room, and not enough time having been taken to bathe and to cleanse the teeth and mouth properly.

It is better for the child to eat the chief meal in the middle of the day, at least up to the age of 12. It should be ready for him in time, so that he may eat it without hurry, or anxiety that he may be late to school.

Supper should comprise only easily digested foods; meats (because of their stimulating nature), cheese and pastries are better omitted. Nuts can often take the place of meat at a meal, and are especially good to use as sandwich fillings. Most nuts contain about 50 times as much fat, and less than one-fifth the as much fat, and less than one-fifth the carbohydrates, as an equal amount of wheat flour, and have about double the fuel value and energy-producing power. Nuts, raisins or dates are each of them a good addition to whole wheat bread, and children will often eat it with such an addition when they otherwise would not bread, and children will often with such an addition when they otherwise would not.

Children at the age of 5 to 12, when they are losing their temporary teeth, are apt to form bad habits of eating on account of loose teeth, which hurt to bite on, and, therefore, they will bolt down their food without chewing it.

Most housekeepers must have observed how much fatter mutton is than an old fowl than in a young chicken, and how much fatter mutton is than lamb, which goes to show that the young of all animals has not the reserve of fat that the older one has.

Quoting from the late Dr. Ellen H. Richards: "The amount of food needed increases rapidly from birth to about 4 years of age, very slowly from 4 to 10 and with a rapid increase from this time to 24. From 16 to 24 the carbohydrates (the energy producing foods) should be increased more rapidly than should be increased more rapidly than should be increased more rapidly than the content of the carbohydrates (the energy producing foods) and with a rapid increase from this time to 24. Met Death as Result, Writes He Was Ready for End.

ROSEBURG, Or., June 17.—(Special.)
Important among the testimony rought out at the inquest over the ody of John Adams, a former Portland man, here today, were two par-tially mutilated letters in which Adams

One of the letters was written on Friday, the day of the tragedy, and was adddressed "To Whom It May Concern." The letter reads in part:

"I, John Adams, do on this day take the laws into my own hands in revenge for the people that I killed for setting my wife or Mrs. J. P. Adams, against me. My dearest sweetheart Rilla told me on the fifteenth of May, she would write to me if her folks would let her in a week. Man About Crased.

"I own up that I am about crazy. I have wept every day since we parted in West Roseburg. I am sorry for my deed, but I have brooded so much over her that my poor heart is broken for the love of my dear wife, which I should have but cannot get, on account of her folks.

"We were married at Eugene in January and that was the happiest time of my life. It did not last long, however, for just as soon as her people found it out they tried to separate us and finally succeeded, but they have not a woman to deal with this time, but have a Pennsylvania Dutchman, who don't give a care if he dies, for he is broken-hearted and they broke it in persuading my dear Rilla to leave me." Another letter begins thus: "Good bye my beloved wife, Mrs. John Adams, or Mrs. Rilla Nelson," then it proceeds. "I have been brooding over our parting until it has got the best of me and I take this way out of it. If you were here I would have settled it easier than this way."

Letters Torn to Bits.

When discovered by members of the Hardman family the letters had been torn in hundreds of pieces and hidden beneath a pile of leaves within a few feet of where Adams sustained the fatal wound. Many of the fragments were covered with blood and werp only deciphered after great difficulty. Both letters were enclosed in envelopes bearing the return mark of the Hofmann house, of Eugene.

The Coroner's inquest over Adams today brought out evidence to the effect that Adams had told people that he intended to kill Mrs. Hardman and her family. The inquest will not be concluded before late tomorrow. Graf, who was shot by Adams, is improved today. Ben Hardman, who fatally wounded Adams, will be released from jail on bail tomorrow.
