

POLICE AUTO IS HIT BY CAR; 5 INJURED

Patrolman Keegan's Legs Are Crushed--Other Persons in Patrol Bruised.

TWO CARMEN ARRESTED

Crash Occurs When Department's Machine Is at Third and Everett Streets--Patrol Was Badly Wrecked in Accident.

While responding to a hurry-up call to the Ash-street dock, where it was reported that two persons were about to jump into the river, the police auto patrol was run into and wrecked by a St. Johns car at the corner of Third and Burnside streets at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The legs of Patrolman Keegan were so badly crushed that it may be necessary to amputate them. The other four occupants of the patrol were painfully bruised.

Patrol's Speed Slow.

Were it not for the fact that the machine was running at a moderate rate of speed, most of the occupants probably would have been killed or severely injured. Ray King, who was in the machine, sustained a badly wrenched shoulder.

The patrol was proceeding east on Everett street, with gong clanging loudly, when at the turn it was hit by the streetcar going ahead at full speed. For a moment the patrol seemed about to topple over, but it righted itself. It was dragged along about 30 feet with the trolley car before it stopped. Patrolman Keegan was sitting on the right side, and beside him was Captain Keller. Keegan would have been knocked off and probably ground to death had not Captain Keller held him.

Dr. J. Etzelson, who had been summoned on the call in the belief that medical assistance might be necessary, was cut about the forehead. Other occupants were Patrolman Scheffer, who was at the wheel, and L. A. Farnsworth, a newspaper man.

F. H. Englin was motorman on the car that struck the machine and E. Henderson was the conductor. Both were arrested.

The right side of the auto patrol was crushed.

THE ATHENS OF AMERICA

Title Claimed by Tryon, N. C., Home of Noted Residents.

New York Sun. The little town of Tryon, N. C., sets itself up as the real Athens of America. Boston and Indianapolis may pick up the gauntlet if they choose. Tryon is untrifled. It boasts that in proportion to population it has more literary geniuses and near geniuses than any other place in America.

The population of Tryon is only 400 or 500, to be sure; so that half a dozen celebrities would make a pretty good showing. But the little mountain town has much more than a literary flavor than so small a colony would impart. In the Manufacturers Record the following list is given of people who either have lived in Tryon or who in the next home or who spend a large part of their time there.

William Gillette, the actor-playwright, years ago resided in Tryon. He built a home here and from time to time has added to his real estate holdings until he now owns 1600 to 1800 acres of land, some of which has been put into cultivation, but most of which will be kept in its pristine beauty of a great natural park. His brother-in-law, George Warner, who is associated in literary work with his brother, Charles Dudley Warner, manages Gillette's interests and makes Tryon his permanent home.

Dr. Henry Garrigue, a writer on medical questions and a man of international fame, makes Tryon his permanent home. Dr. Bedell, author of numerous scientific articles, has for some years been a Tryonite. Mrs. Peattie, author of "The Edges of Things" and "The Relegated Forest," and William Hawley Smith, author of "The Evolution of Dodo," "The Spectator" and "All the Children of All the People," count Tryon as their home. So does Mrs. Erskine, author of "The Mountain Girl" and "When the Gates Lift Up Their Heads."

Others are George Broadhurst, playwright, author of "The Man of the Hour," "Bought and Paid For," his play, "An American Lord," was written in Tryon--Frank Spearman, author of "Whispering Smith"; Margaret Morley, writer of nature stories; Dr. Edward Emerson, son of Ralph Waldo Emerson and editor of his father's letters; Frank Brown, editor of the Dial; Claude Washburn, author of "A Page From the Book of Paris"; Miss Mary Large, author of "The Twelfth Juror"; Mrs. Conley Ward, who writes as Lydia Avery Conoley, author of "Under the Pines"; Miss Edith Garrigue, a portrait painter; Miss Lois Wilcox and Louis Rowell, landscape artists.

'NO THIRD PARTY'--STUBBS

Governor Says There Is No Need, as T. R. Will Sweep Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kan., June 25.--"There will be no third party in Kansas," was the statement today by Governor Stubbs. "There is no need of a third party in this state. But Roosevelt's name will be on the ballot in Kansas in November and the Colonel will sweep the state."

Petitions are being circulated in Kansas to nominate under the state primary law a set of 18 Presidential electors favorable to President Taft. The Taft men are afraid Republican electors favorable to Colonel Roosevelt whose petitions are already filed will not vote for the President.

PREPARING FOR COLLEGE

President Hadley of Yale Deplores Passing of "Old Days."

The Annual Report of President Hadley of Yale.

In the old days we used to speak of boys being "prepared for college." We now speak of their meeting "requirements for admission." The difference of mental attitude on the part of the teachers, the pupils and the public which is represented by these two phrases is very great indeed.

When the college course consisted chiefly of advanced Latin and Greek and mathematics, it was an obvious necessity for the boy who came to college to have studied elementary Latin and Greek and mathematics. If a boy was compelled to study Demosthenes in freshman year, he must have learned Greek grammar and Xenophon before he came in order to be able to go on with Demosthenes successfully. If instead of studying Demosthenes he was allowed to study elementary French or elementary chemistry Greek no longer became a necessary preparation.

It was a mere requirement for admission--a requirement which high schools that did not have a course in Greek were apt to think quite arbitrary and unnecessary. For side by side with the introduction of the elective system the idea became prevalent among our teachers that one kind of knowledge was for all practical purposes equivalent to another kind of knowledge.

This view is fortunately not so prevalent today as it was 10 or 15 years ago. But enough remains of this idea of equivalence of different branches of knowledge to make it necessary for the college which insists on having one rather than another to prove its case; to show that the students who wish to pursue its courses are better off with Latin and mathematics than sociology or domestic science.

I believe that we should do well to admit men to college whose average is well above the passing mark, even though there are some subjects in which they are deficient. At present we admit a man who just passes on all his subjects, while we condemn a man who does brilliantly on three-quarters of them and has not prepared himself on the others. Yet in the majority of instances a man of the latter type is likely to prove a better student than a man of the former type.

PROFESSOR BREAKS LEG

PORTLAND BUSINESS COLLEGE MAN IN RUNAWAY.

Team Dashes Down Steep Hill Near Vennerberg as Leathers on Neckyoke Break.

VANCOUVER, Wash., June 25.--(Special.)--For the want of a stout piece of leather to the neckyoke of a buggy he engaged yesterday to visit Vennerberg, Professor Williams, of a Portland business college, tonight is suffering with a badly fractured left leg. He was taken from here to his home in Woodlawn, Portland, late this evening, after being brought 18 miles in an automobile for surgical attention.

Professor Williams came to Vancouver yesterday and boarded the electric to Richards, where he engaged a team and buggy to take him to Vennerberg. He engaged a driver also. On the return trip the neckyoke straps broke and a runaway down a steep hill resulted. After dashing about for a quarter of a mile, the team ran into the side of a bridge, precipitating the occupants into the ditch in a mass of wreckage, and breaking the left leg of Mr. Williams squarely off just above the ankle. It has not been determined whether amputation will be necessary.

The accident happened near Vennerberg and the injured were taken to the home of nearby residents, until aid from Vancouver could be summoned. H. S. Thompson, a real estate broker, brought the injured man to Vancouver in an automobile.

CANDY SUSPECT JAILED

EX-SWEETHEART OF DEAD IDAHO GIRL IS SULLEN.

Ray Weaver, Alias Wilson, Believed to Have Sent Fatal Sweets, Is Caught Near Walla Walla.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., June 25.--Ray Weaver, alias Ray Wilson, wanted in Shoshone County, Idaho, for the alleged murder of Miss Lena Speers, is in the County Jail and will be taken today to the Idaho town by Deputy Sheriff Cameron to await trial.

Weaver was picked up at Eureka by Deputy Sheriff Goode, after being traced through calling for his mail at the Postoffice.

Weaver is accused of having sent a box of poisoned candy through the mails. It being received by Miss Lena Speers, a young woman living near Rupert, Idaho. She got the candy from the mail box, ate a few pieces and died an hour later in great agony.

Weaver had been friendly with the girl, and evidence developed at the inquest is said to have led officers to suspect him. He is sullen and refuses to discuss the case in any way.

He will not demand extradition papers, but has agreed to go without.

CHOLERA CURE IN SIGHT

New Serum Gives Immunity From Disease When Injected.

PARIS, June 25.--Dr. Pierre Roux has communicated to the Academy of Sciences the results of experiments at the Pasteur Institute in Tunis with anti-cholera serum.

This consists of a culture of living cholera bacilli, which is injected into the veins of several persons, conferred complete immunity.

Dr. Roux believes effective vaccination against cholera is within sight.

He was a recruit just enrolled in a crack cavalry regiment and he was paying his first visit to the riding school.

"Ere yer horse," said the instructor. The recruit advanced, took the bridle gingerly and examined his mount with great care.

"What's it got this strap round it for?" he asked, pointing to the girth.

"Well," explained the instructor solemnly, "you see, all our horses 'ave a keen sense of humor, an' as they sometimes 'ave sudden fits of laughter when they see the recruits tryin' to ride, we put bands around 'em to keep 'em from burstin' their sides!"

IRISH HOME RULE NO DANGER NOW

Unionism Not Threatened by Present Bill Is Claim of Those Interested.

LANDLORD IS CONVERTED

Nationalist Members Are Drawing Salaries of $2000 a Year and Consequently Can Remain as Thorn in Flesh.

BY TIMOTHY O'CONNOR.

DUBLIN, June 25.--(Special.)--The present home rule bill is converting Unionists to home rule. The most recent recruit is Sir Morgan O'Connell, who shows that the bill does not mean separation, but the only possible policy, and the Unionists have no alternative. Sir Morgan says that for 40 years the Irish Nationalist party have been in the English parliament, and agitated for Home Rule. This party has been able to present at Westminster only by the financial support of the English government, and to obtain it extreme views have been put forward. In Ireland, unfortunately, extremes of agitation resorted to. No one can possibly condemn many of the speeches and much of the agitation more than I do. So much for the past.

The Liberal party has brought in this bill now before the House of Commons. Its most strenuous opponent cannot say that it is separation, and if an act of Parliament means anything, this bill never can lead to separation. In its details this bill may be unworkable, its finance may be bad and it certainly will require amendment in many ways. The entire Nationalist party has accepted this bill in full discharge of all its claims to self-government. The House of Lords will doubtless refuse to pass any bill, no matter how amended, that can be called home rule. So much for the future.

General Election No Help.

Now, let me assume that a general election does take place, and that the Unionist party is returned to power. Can it hope to have and to keep such a majority as will enable it to look upon the votes of 81 Nationalist members as of no account whatever? These Nationalist members will not, for the future, have to collect their votes over for their own party. They will be there in receipt of $2000 a year each from the British taxpayer--and their one and only object in remaining there will be to force on home rule, and possibly obstruct other business by all means in their power. In this they will undoubtedly be helped by an increased labor vote and by such Liberals as are left in the House.

Mr. Bonar Law at Belfast promised tariff reform and extended land purchase as a substitute for this bill. Both of these are very excellent things for Ireland, I believe, but "killing home rule by kindness" will be an expensive business for the British taxpayer. Fifty millions of money have already actually been paid to promote land purchase, and as far as I know not even one district has been sold. It is not any less vehement in his demand for home rule, so that it is a nice mathematical calculation how many millions it will take to make 81 Nationalist members into Unionists.

Unionist Is Converted.

I am an Irish landlord who has lived all my life in Ireland. I have always been a Unionist because I feared that home rule meant separation. Separation has been buried by the acceptance of this bill. To me there are but two ways, and two ways only, out of the position as it exists:

1. The giving to Ireland the right to manage her own local affairs, and thus turn her from being a danger into a strength to England.

2. To leave these things as they are, and to disenfranchise every Nationalist constituency.

WINS HIS SUBJECTS.

Christian, of Denmark, Has Many Sterling, Endearing Qualities.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Christian, the new Danish ruler, is in the very prime of life, and leads an absolutely correct life. He is serious-minded and full of energy, so that the people of his realm are justified in looking forward to the new reign with the keenest appreciation. He is exceedingly clever, and has given himself systematically to study. He passed through a whole course at the University of Copenhagen, where he studied law and political economy, and even possesses a pilot certificate, a thing very much needed among his sea- and-land-and-bay-girded little land.

To the Danish army, however, he has given his chief work. He is known as an officer of brilliant qualities, one who is not afraid to take a decided line of action if he believes that the interests of the nation require it.

Through always "correct," he is democratic and dislikes formality, but in conversation with any one, no matter in what walk of life, he will soon get all that is to be known out of his man. The king has been twice near-touched the King. In 1898 he married Princess Alexandrine of Mecklenburg, a sister of the German Crown Princess. She is an exemplary mother to her two young sons.

Christian is anything but a "sober, somber, gloomy" Hamlet. His tact has kept him free from all political embarrassments and has earned him the loyalty of the Danes, long before he ascended the throne of the Vikings. In fact, the people are so fond of him that they presented him with the magnificent palace of Marselisborg, near Aarhus.

EUGENICS A SUCCESS HERE

A Community in New York City Has Fifty Healthy Children.

Marguerite Moores Marshall in the New York Evening World.

Eugenics is unquestionably the science of the moment.

Only the movement for better breeding of the human race is so very new that most of its advocates necessarily deal with theory alone, not generally realized that in New York is the one spot where for more than 60 years eugenics has been made a matter of careful and comprehensive practice.

"The result," says James B. Herrick, head of the Onondaga Lake Community of Perfectionists, "goes to show that the children of carefully selected parents are at least six times as fit as the children born of the average hit-or-miss marriage.

"The children in our community,

Gave Him A New Stomach

"There are thousands of sufferers from stomach and liver troubles whom I wish I could meet and tell what Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets would do for them," writes H. M. Young, editor of the Sun, Lake View, Ohio. "One bottle of the tablets would end the trouble for most of them. I suffered intensely after eating and never, felt well and no treatment or medicine I tried ever seemed to do me any good until reading an advertisement for Chamberlain's Tablets in my own paper. I tried a bottle. The first few doses gave me surprising relief, and the second bottle seemed to give me a new stomach and perfect good health. I don't think anything would give me such a complete cure. They are wonderful."

numbering about 50, are of the second generation of selected fathers and mothers. But two of these have died, one of them from a contagious disease caught while visiting in another state.

"According to statistics, one-fourth of all the children in the United States die before reaching the age of 5. Our death rate is one-sixth that.

"Furthermore, every one of our children is far above the average, physically, mentally and morally. We have not blind babies, no anaemic or diseased children or no mental deficients."

Say, for example, that the new concern puts in $5,000,000 and the old has $5,000,000 invested, and that 20,000 customers are served. Do not the 20,000 customers pay interest upon $10,000,000 when one company with an interest charge of $5,000,000 would serve the same purpose? They certainly do.

Then two companies will cause higher rates to prevail than one company with reasonable regulation by the State Commission.
