

ENRAGED SUITOR SHOTS IN THEATER

Herman Emery, Stage Manager, Victim of Assassin at Pantages.

ASSAILANT IS TACOMA MAN

Otto W. Pinch, Mission Preacher, Insanely Jealous of Chorus Girl, Believed to Have Mortally Wounded Wrong Man.

Tragedy was substituted for musical comedy at Pantages Theater at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday night, when Otto Ward Pinch, of 2704 Sixth street, Tacoma, after gaining entrance to the stage and being denied an interview with Miss Carl Lowe, one of the company present in "The Seven Aviator Girls," a musical comedy, with whom he was enamored, fatally shot Herman P. Emery, the stage manager, who resides at 547 Fourth street.

With revolver clenched in his fist, Pinch backed to the side door through which he entered and ran up Alder to Park and thence north to Stark street, where he was arrested by Patrolmen Frey and J. de Murphy, after being pointed out by George Meyer, property man at Pantages. Meyer witnessed the shooting and pursued Emery's assailant until he met the policemen.

Crowd Delays Officer. Murphy and Frey pursued the fleeing man through a dense crowd of revelers on the Seventh-street branch of the Court of Honor. The crowd, thinking that Pinch was some reveler whom the police were looking for, tried to trip them as they ran. They caught up with Pinch at Seventh and Stark under one of the E. F. O. Elks arches, but submitted without a struggle, and was walked to the police station.

"This man came in the side entrance to the theater to see Miss Lowe," said Meyer, last night. "I called Miss Lowe, whose act was about to be called. She caught sight of the caller and hurried to her left in the room seeing the man sought George Sellinger, manager of the act who, accompanied by Emery, returned to find what was wanted. As they approached the stranger, he called out to the girl and said: 'I am engaged to this girl and want to see her. What do you want?'"

"Pulling the revolver out of his pocket, the stranger shot Emery and then retreated out the side door. "That man butted into my affairs. It is a thing that I do not like at all. So I bought a gun and I shot him. Sure, I only shot once. It was a good shot, and I think he had it in his mind to do. Lock me up." Pinch took his arrest quietly, handed over all joy and happiness and hoped that when the time for their departure was at hand they would be able to say in all sincerity and truth that this had been the greatest convention at which they had ever gathered together. From the lips of E. R. Ingersoll, of Seattle, came a pithy speech, which came on Saturday, I got wise on Sunday. Monday I wired my wife. Today she's here."

It was perfectly clear to everybody that Admiral Reynolds, one of the guests of the evening, would have preferred to face a nautical foe than a paper one. He admitted that he had never said a thing in his life and that he could write even less, but that the bringing of the famous old "scolion of the sea" to Portland was one of the proudest achievements of his life. General Bob Brown, of Louisville, Tenn., managing editor of the Louisville Times and past grand exalted ruler, hit "the nail on the head" when he remarked, "I am beginning to find out that you people of Portland are as great and as good as you imagine yourselves to be."

That Portland had gone one better than Philadelphia was the sorrowful admission made by Chester Ray, of that fair city. Both Lieutenants Kline and Riddle, of the Oregon, did not take long to express their pleasure at being present. Others who spoke included the grand chaplain, Rev. John Dysart, Norman Vaughan, Donald J. Sterling, of the Journal; John W. Kelly, of the Telephone; Captain Speller, harbor master; Colonel Russell Harrison, Colonel Tom Hunter, Cary Applegate, grand trustee, Colonel David M. Dunne, K. K. Kull, John Paulsen, grand secretary, Harry C. McAllister, Fred Robinson, grand secretary, and Will Attwell, of Texas.

Among those present were: William H. Atwell, Dallas, Texas; John W. Kelly, R. L. Wilcox, Roanoke, Pa.; James H. Cassell, Ralph Staehl, George Pritchard, Moe Morris, George J. McCarthy, Tacoma; W. H. B. Brown, W. H. Brown, W. H. Brown, J. Austin, Texas; J. G. Seed, Fred W. Barker, Dick Mullin, Milton W. Werschul, G. E. Bissell, H. C. Bixby, C. M. Bristol, A. B. Slaymaker, Lou Kennedy, J. A. O'Connell, J. E. Murphy, G. M. A. O. C. Letter, George A. White, H. M. White, Claude D. Starr, L. K. Hodgson, E. H. C. Vincent, James Glosky, St. Paul; Claude L. Simpson, Fred C. Robinson, John W. Endearing Notes Written. "During last week when we were in Tacoma and since arriving in Portland Monday, my daughter received many postcards and letters from Pinch, each containing endearing messages," said Mrs. Lowe. In these, four of which came in today's mail, he repeatedly asserted that he was engaged to her and would marry her. Becoming alarmed before leaving Tacoma, I summoned two detectives and asked them to keep watch of the man because I considered him insane and was afraid for my daughter's safety. They assured me that we would not be troubled any longer by the writer of the letters, explaining that he had been placed in an asylum. I never saw the man before tonight."

Pinch followed Miss Lowe and company to Portland from Tacoma for the admitted purpose of settling accounts with Sellinger whom he charges with having replaced him in the affections of the petite, but handsome actress. That he failed in his mission or was so insanely mad that he made a mistake in choosing his victim is apparent from the fact that the bullet intended for Sellinger lodged in the abdomen of Emery, who preceded Sellinger in responding to the appeal of Mrs. Lowe after Pinch had demanded to see her daughter.

Mrs. Lowe and daughter reside in Chicago while Sellinger gives Louisville, Ky., as his residence. Victim is Officer. Emery for a number of years has been a regular deputy attached to the Sheriff's office.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Scores of deaths by heat prostration were reported from the big cities of the country yesterday. All up and down the Atlantic seaboard the heat was intense and suffering great. Prostrations by the hundred were reported. In New York there were seven deaths, two were reached 92 degrees.

There were two deaths and scores of prostrations at Montreal, one fatality at Cincinnati, six deaths from heat at Philadelphia, nine deaths and 21 prostrations at Chicago, three prostrations at Milwaukee and hundreds of prostrations reported from other points. Hartford, Conn., had a temperature of 100. Baltimore had the hottest night of the year. Boston had two deaths from heat and the mercury climbed to 100. The heat was extended throughout the Southern States, but no deaths were reported from that section.

ADMIRAL REYNOLDS AND FAMILY GUESTS OF PORTLAND. Alfred Reynolds, admiral of the Pacific Coast reserve fleet, is the honored guest of Portland and occupies a suite at the Imperial Hotel, with Mrs. Reynolds and their three children, Mrs. James Gibrath, James H. Morrison and Irwin F. Morrison, and one grandchild, Harriet E. Morrison. Two sisters and one brother also survive him. These are Mrs. Mary Ellen Carnahan, Mrs. Hannah Marguerite Hamlin and William I. Morrison.

YESTERDAY ADMIRAL REYNOLDS AND HIS STAFF returned to the city, called upon them by various officials of clubs and were entertained by Edgar B. Piper, president of the Commercial Club, at luncheon. John H. Burgard and F. A. Freeman were the reception committee and were told that he could command anything or anyone in Portland at his pleasure while the city's guest. He said he was glad that he had a part in the affair and was happy that he had been able to send the ship into her own state.

MISS PORTLAND FIRST PUBLIC RECEPTION 1905

Miss Portland's Second Reception 1912

In 1905, just prior to the opening of our great Exposition, I published the above out in one of my advertisements. What that reception did for Portland most of us know. We had a general housecleaning, mud streets gave way to hard-surface pavement, wooden sidewalks were replaced with cement, wooden shacks were torn down and skyscrapers took their place, our population doubled in five years, until today, when Miss Portland holds her second grand reception of National importance it is acknowledged by visitors from all parts of the country that Portland is the most beautiful city on the American Continent, and one of the most progressive, wide-awake business centers in the United States, caused by her matchless railroad and water facilities. Our deep channel to the sea has been fully demonstrated by the presence of that famous battleship, Oregon, now in our port. The Oregon draws 28 feet of water. I will now make a statement from my viewpoint, that no city or state has a brighter present or more brilliant prospective future than has Portland and Oregon.

Five years ago I advised people to buy real estate anywhere in Portland and assured them that they could make no mistake. That my advice was right you have the overwhelming evidence before you. Today I give you the same advice: Buy Portland property, and before purchasing be sure to see Walnut Park, the best located residence section in a city of beautiful homes. A restricted district, no shacks or stores permitted, streets paved and hard-surfaced, alleys, located on the highest ground between the rivers; five carlines insure best car service in the city; Jefferson High School finished, largest in the United States; also a public library to cost $35,000, under construction, both located in Walnut Park. Any U car going north will take you to my office on the property. Agent always in attendance. A limited number of lots, 50 feet by 100, at $40 a front foot—on favorable terms to homebuilders only.

Speculators Attention I have 50 acres of the most sightly land on the west side of the river, overlooking the city and mountains, a panoramic view of unsurpassed grandeur, within ten minutes from the business center of the city. I can offer this magnificent tract of land at a price that will positively insure the purchaser handsome returns on his investment. You can't afford to overlook this offer, as it is one of the gilt-edge buys that only knock at your door once in a lifetime.
