

ELKS' REUNION STORIES

"If I could only make our folks believe me when I tell them what I've seen I shall be satisfied," said G. S. Maxwell, of the Chamber of Commerce of Dallas, Tex.

"I AM not a man of many words," said Henry Brie, of Juneau, Alaska, "so you will not find me saying very much."

"A CITY void of graft from the hotel and restaurant point of view at any rate," said Brother Billy Baxter of Salt Lake City.

THE friendliness of the people and the entrancing kind of weather were two of the features of Portland which were first noticed by William E. Drisland, district deputy of New York.

"Judge Addington, also of New York, was talking to me about it just before he left. I know he thought as I do, but he was also immensely pleased with the legal holiday given for the parade, a thing I believe that is unprecedented in the annals of Elkdom."

"IT IS very hard to tell you people here what I think, for it has all been so remarkable. The first thing I noticed on my arrival was the number of skyscrapers for the size of the place."

AMONG the foremost of unique features of the convention was a Japanese parade of unusual size which was being carried up and down the streets by C. J. Hahn and C. H. Harder, members of the Falls, Idaho Lodge, No. 1122.

JEROME B. DAY, of Moscow, Idaho, Lodge No. 249, is known as "Jerry" by every one of the 200 Elks that came from that state, and of whom there are at the Portland.

THE same spirit of feistivity that moved some two dozen visiting Elks to commandeer a city street-sprinkling cart and "ride the water wagon" up and down Washington street Monday night, led another bunch of visitors to attempt to put one over on Sergeant Carlson, of the first night relief.

Carlson was keeping a watchful eye on seventh night, when he suddenly noticed half a dozen heavy-set and muscular Elks start a fight. Other Elks hastened to interfere, and were drawn into the fray themselves, until there was apparently a small-sized street riot in progress.

GEORGE MCARTHUR, of Tacoma, Lodge 174, who is in charge of Tacoma headquarters in the Portland Hotel, is perhaps one of the best-known telegraph operators on the Coast. He was sitting in his headquarters entertaining some visitors, when he suddenly pricked up his ears and listened intently.

WOMEN screamed in dismay and pity, drivers brought heavy cars to a sudden halt and solicitous inquiries were made last night when nearly a score of puppies, crushed under the wheels of the vehicles, uttered their dying yelps and howls.

A TELEGRAM was just received by August Menn, Jr., from San Jose, Cal., Lodge No. 525, R. P. O. Elks, stating that they had let the contract for their new building, to cost $85,000, except furniture.

for their beautiful three-story building, six years ago at the time of the earthquake, San Jose lodge went down, and nearly out. That never-fail spirit of Elkdom took hold of the boys, and with a $1500 note starting them in the face they purchased the old Methodist Church property and went in debt over $25,000.

W. E. HOLCOMB, designer of the Elks' San Francisco badge, is such a clever sleight of hand performer that when he put on a series of stunts on the train coming to Portland, all the women gave their jewelry into the care of the porter.

GRANT Pauley, who designed the glassy watch badge of the Muskegoe, Okla., delegation, is the exalted ruler of that lodge. In place of figures indicating the time on the dial, are the letters M-u-s-k-o-g-e-e, O-k-l-a. The watch is black and Ingersoll in design and it really runs. On it the Elks' logo is attached.

THERE is much joking around Medford headquarters about the number of politicians in the delegation from the Southern city. Judge Trim, George H. Miller, Socialist Councillman; County Engineer Harmon, A. W. Dean, Captain of the National Guard company; Clarence Reames, who is running for joint Representative for Douglas and Jackson counties on the Democratic ticket and C. E. Whisler, on the Republican ticket; August D. Singler, candidate for Sheriff; R. Coleman, County Clerk; Fred Colvig, County Recorder; "Bob" Dow, Deputy Sheriff; W. T. Grieve and John Demmer, ex-Councillmen; also are interested personally in the coming election.

SWAIN BEATTY, of Caldwell, a member of Boise lodge No. 310, called on his old tifficum, Bill Cuddy, yesterday. Thirty years ago they helped put Caldwell on the map of Idaho by starting the town. Bill ran the newspaper and Swain beat him to it by conducting a disseminator of daily news—the swellest barber shop in the territory; he also "doubled in brass," the first requisite of leading citizens in those days, and acquired fame so rapidly that at the time of the Lewis and Clark fair, the Governor appointed him general music master of the parade. Now with silver threads on his dome, he lets the younger element make the music while he recounts past glories.

THE Michigan Society of Portland has maintained headquarters this week at the Imperial Hotel. Visiting Elks from that state are invited to register there and meet their friends.

ALTHOUGH J. H. Albright, of the Bremerton Elks' delegation, was burned by the explosion of a blank cartridge on the miniature battleship Oregon, in the parade Thursday and was rushed to the hospital, he did not regard the injuries as serious enough to require him to wait until they were dressed, after he had arrived at the hospital. The powder burned his arm somewhat and made a small flesh wound, and under the pressure of the momentary pain he decided to go to the hospital. When he arrived at St. Vincent's he was asked to wait in the dressing room for a moment while attendants procured the necessary outfit with which to dress the wound. When they returned, however, he had gone.

IN memory of the "absent services" of the Elks, a special service was held under the starlit skies Wednesday night by the Pendleton lodge No. 288. Promptly at 11 o'clock the special train stopped on the prairie west of Umatilla. The engine sounded 11 whistles, and the Elks left the train and gathered nearby. The cowboy band struck up the tune of "Auld Lang Syne," and the assembled Elks took up the strains.

SALEM, Oregon, lodge, No. 326, sprung a surprise at the close of the Grand Lodge meeting Tuesday by presenting the members with a carton of Royal Ann and Lambert cherries. The committee furnished 2400 boxes of the fruit, which were distributed to the members as they passed out. Special boxes were given to the officers of the lodge and members of committees.

COAL-BLACK pickaninnys, just like the "bliggers" way down in Mississippi, in striped water melons and the whole lot set in a natural cotton boll, is the official badge of the Meridian, Miss., delegation of the same name. There are only 100 of the unique badges in existence. The three Elks are S. C. Sugerman, Ike Rosenbaum and S. C. Moseley, all of Meridian. "Chammy has black, curly hair and regulation chocolate-colored skin, and he roasts serenely in his favorite fruit. The watermelon is clearly arranged in the center of a cotton boll, and the thorn or stem of the boll is left for a handle. The Mississippi Elks think they have the only badge in town.

THE Idaho Elks' Band rendered an interesting concert last night at the Portland Hotel. Features were a cornet solo by Professor C. J. Carey and a tenor solo by Claude Huard. The programme was brought to a close by a ragtime concert.

"WATCH Tacoma grow!" exclaimed a bystander, plagiarizing somewhat on the Tacoma slogan, as the delegation from that city passed down Alder street in Thursday's parade. "Yes, and we did not bring them all over with us, either," retorted a Tacoma Elk in the line.
