

MULKEY OUT FOR THIRD PARTY TOGA

Leader of New Progressives to Try for Seat in Senate to Succeed Bourne.

ANNOUNCEMENT IS FORMAL

Petitions and Platform Soon Will Be Circulated—Candidate Once Set in August Body, Finishing Mitchell's Unexpired Term.

Frederick W. Mulkey, of this city, yesterday formally announced his candidacy for United States Senator as a National Progressive to succeed Jonathan Bourne, Jr.

Mr. Mulkey will arrange immediately for circulating the necessary nominating petitions, which must be filed with the Secretary of State in order to have his name printed on the official ballot in the November election. His opponents are Ben Selling, the Progressive Republican nominee, and Dr. Harry Lane, of the Democratic ticket.

"In announcing my candidacy at this time," said Mr. Mulkey, yesterday, "I am simply falling in line with the position taken by Theodore Roosevelt, who, in an interview published today, declared for the organization of a third party that shall be separate and distinct from existing political organizations.

Support Is Expected.

"A new party to be effective must have representation in Congress. In offering myself as a candidate of the National Progressives for the Senate, I feel that I am entitled to the support of the progressives of Oregon, because of my past activities for Mr. Roosevelt in this state. My record upon the question of the right of the people to participate directly in political affairs is an open book.

"At this time, however, neither party, in my opinion, stands for those fundamental principles that will successfully solve present-day economic and industrial problems. I still agree with the Republican party on the great principle of protection to American industry, the wage-earner and the farmer, but I believe in a revision of the tariff downward to the point that American industry will so operate that a proper equilibrium will be maintained between capital and labor.

"When a tariff schedule so disturbs that equilibrium as to cause the bulk of profit to flow to capital, then I think that schedule should be revised to obviate that objection. However, I propose going more into detail in a few days as to just where I stand on political issues. I shall prepare and issue my formal platform in a few days.

Industrial Strife Looms.

"Senator Bailey, of Texas, was recently reported to have said that the progressives of the United States were fast bringing the country to the condition of France at the time of the French Revolution. In that Senator Bailey is undoubtedly wrong. This country will be confronted with an industrial revolution unless some device is found to obviate that revolution. The causes of that revolution will be the amassing of the large percentage of the wealth of the country in the hands of a few.

"It is in this amassing that the progressives are seeking to prevent and they are seeking to prevent it by constitutional means and by modification, but not a rejection of the individualistic plan as distinguished from the Socialistic."

Mr. Mulkey is a native of Portland, the son of a pioneer family that came to Oregon in 1849. He was a member of the Portland City Council from 1890 to 1892, serving as its concluding year of his term as president of that body. In 1905-06, he was a member and chairman of the State Tax Commission, which drafted the present tax laws of the state.

Former Plurality 60,000.

In 1906, Mr. Mulkey was elected United States Senator from Oregon to fill the unexpired term of Senator Mitchell. Mr. Mulkey and Senator Bourne, who was elected in the same election, were the first two Senators chosen in this state by statement No. 1. In the election, Mr. Mulkey received a plurality of approximately 60,000.

Mr. Mulkey managed the Roosevelt campaign in this state last Spring and materially assisted in carrying the state for the ex-President by a plurality of 4200. Mr. Mulkey attended the recent Republican National convention at Chicago, but upon returning to Oregon, denounced the methods employed in securing the nomination of Taft. At the same time he announced his withdrawal from the Republican party and declared in favor of the organization of the proposed third, or National Progressive party.

Only last Monday night, when the National Progressive Club of Oregon perfected organization and issued a call for a mass meeting of Oregon Progressives in this city, July 25, Mr. Mulkey was elected a member of the executive or advisory committee of the club. In this election, Mr. Mulkey received the largest vote that was cast in the choice of five members of the committee. Mr. Mulkey is also chairman of the Public Dock Commission and always has been actively identified with all public movements for the civic betterment and advancement of Portland and the state.

CLEVELAND GRAYS TO VISIT

Independent Military Organization Will See Portland.

The crack military company of the Cleveland Grays of Cleveland, O., will reach Portland on their special train at 9 o'clock this morning from Seattle and will pass the day enjoying the scenery in and about the city. A delegation from the Ohio Society of this city will greet the party at the station, but no programme for entertainment of the party while here has been arranged, since the visitors already have settled upon the method in which they desire to pass the day.

In the forenoon they will make a trip about the city in automobiles and in the afternoon a boat will be chartered and a trip made up the Columbia to view the famous scenic features along its shores. They will return and start from Portland on their journey southward at 10 o'clock tonight. Headquarters of the party will be on the special train at the station.

The Cleveland Grays is one of the most prominent independent military organizations in the United States. It has been in existence since 1835. It has been for a long time the custom to make an annual trip to some important section. Cuba, Mexico and other countries have been visited and the Grays have been present at several of the Presidential inaugurations in Washington.

The party consists of about 60 men accompanied by their women and is in command of Captain Frank Hawley.

Railroads Made Defendants.

SALEM, Or., July 16.—(Special)—C. A. Barrett, State Senator from Clatsop County, and others of that county today filed a complaint with the State Railroad Commission against the Pacific branch of the Northern Pacific. In the complaint they allege that the company has failed properly to fence the road and also has failed to place the necessary catwalks. A complaint was also filed by Henry Yanckwich, an attorney of Portland, against the Oregon Electric, charging that the company has failed to maintain adequate depot facilities at Capitol Hill.

UNITED WORKMEN PROPOSE FUSION

Union of Oregon and Washington Orders Talked at Grand Lodge.

BIG DELEGATION PRESENT

Reports Show Wisdom of State in Withdrawing From National Organization Because of Over-Taxation, Is Assertion.

The opening of the thirtieth convention of the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen took place yesterday morning in the assembly rooms of the Hotel Multnomah, when delegates from 85 lodges were present, representing a large percentage of the lodges in the order.

Judge George T. Baldwin, of Klamath Falls, Grand Master, presided. The forenoon session was devoted to the reports from committees and the hearing of resolutions. The rest of the day was taken up with the introduction of visiting members of the Washington Grand Lodge, and the subsequent hearing of addresses by them, in which they advocated the fusion of the two independent states into one. The question of the consolidation of the two states will be taken today.

Finances Are Satisfactory.

The finances of the order were reported, and showed a satisfactory condition. In the reserve fund is $213,883.53, with surplus in the beneficiary fund of $12,277.56 after all claims have been paid. In the interest fund there is a total of $265.71 and a balance in the general coffers of $48,66, making a grand total of $228,884.74.

An important point in this connection is that the order has more than $60,000 in excess of its legal reserve. The medical report showed that in the last two years there had been 151 deaths, with 234 applications for new membership. R. Durham, president of the Merchants' National bank, the Grand Receiver, reported the securities as first-class, adding that the interests were all promptly met.

Turning through all the reports was an indication of the healthy condition of the order.

The main business of the session was to consider the advisability of nationalizing the beneficiary department of its organization. In spite of an appeal by Mrs. Frances B. Olson, of St. Paul, Minn., grand chief of ceremonies, chairman of the law committee, and C. E. Bowman, editor of the Washington Emblem, were permitted to appear before the members of the Oregon order. All made powerful speeches in favor of the amalgamation of the two independent states, showing that the climate of the two was almost identical, while the health conditions were practically similar.

Withdrawal Proves Wise.

The visitors represent some 6500 Workmen in their state, while there are in Oregon approximately 3500 members. Two years ago the Oregon jurisdiction withdrew from the National order on account of overtaxation in comparison with its health conditions. Other states not so healthy as Oregon received a greater proportion of the money, and the large surplus possessed by this state today is advanced as a proof of the wisdom of the body in withdrawing from the National order.

Washington became independent only a year ago, but its officers declare that more than satisfactory progress has been made since then, showing, in their opinion, that the states can more than exist independently, if necessary, though they advocate the fusion of states on the Pacific Coast which have similar conditions of health and climate.

It was decided, among other things, that the next meeting of the lodge would be in April, 1913, instead of in July. The salary of the grand recorder was raised yesterday from $1500 to $1800 a year. At the afternoon session a telegram announced the death of Professor A. L. Clark, of Seaside Lodge. Resolutions of condolence were passed.

Order Dates From 1879.

The first session of the order was held in 1879. The order then embraced Washington, British Columbia and Oregon. Shortly afterwards each formed a separate jurisdiction, holding their conventions annually. Oregon decided six years ago to change the convention from an annual one to a bi-annual affair, partly with a view to avoiding the expense of a yearly meeting.

"Six years ago," said Ralph Feeney, "a level rate plan, formulated by the New York actuary, Miles Dawson, was adopted, which bears a full life insurance on a level rate man, carrying with it, after three years' membership, a choice of three propositions.

"Every member had vested right in the reserve fund, unlike many beneficary orders, which have merely a general fund.

"During the last two years the order has paid eight or 10 claims by members who were unfortunate enough not to be able to pay their assessments. The claims, however, were paid in full, as they had sufficient reserve.

Order Is Unattached.

"The Ancient Order of United Workmen in Oregon is strictly an Oregon institution, incorporated under the state laws of Oregon and one of the healthiest states in the Union. It does not solicit membership in any other state. It has a surplus of nearly $250,000 and a membership of 3500, so that it can be seen readily enough that the order is in a prosperous condition, a claim rarely going over 30 days and often being settled within two weeks."

DEGREE OF HONOR IN SESSION

Proposal From National Body Is Turned Down in Oregon.

While the Ancient Order of United Workmen was holding its biennial convention in the assembly rooms of the Multnomah Hotel, the grand lodge of the Degree of Honor, which is the women's auxiliary, met in the ballroom on the opposite side of the hotel for their 19th session.

The main business of the session was to consider the advisability of nationalizing the beneficiary department of its organization. In spite of an appeal by Mrs. Frances B. Olson, of St. Paul, Minn., grand chief of ceremonies, chairman of the law committee, and C. E. Bowman, editor of the Washington Emblem, were permitted to appear before the members of the Oregon order. All made powerful speeches in favor of the amalgamation of the two independent states, showing that the climate of the two was almost identical, while the health conditions were practically similar.

At the same time the order in Oregon recognizes the officers of the National order as its superiors, differing in this respect from its fraternal order, which has cut adrift entirely from the National order.

In the morning the grand lodge degree was conferred upon 26 delegates. Mrs. Olson made a powerful appeal to the 75 delegates and an equal number of visiting members, pointing out the advantages of joining the parent body. She pointed out that no less than 20 states had already amalgamated their beneficiary work, and she urged the state of Oregon to unite with the others in widening the foundations upon which women obtain their benefit policy.

It was evident that the unhealthy conditions in some of the affiliated states as compared with the magnificent record in that respect of the State of Oregon, was mainly responsible for the proposal, while the strong financial condition of the local state's beneficiary department, a proof that it can stand alone, was another factor in its defeat.

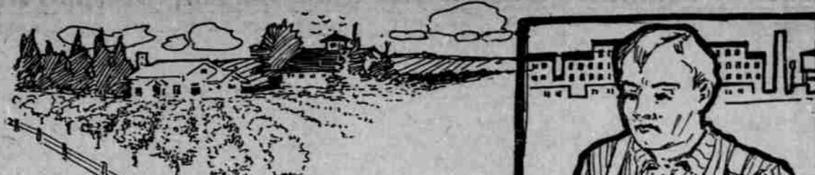

There are altogether in Oregon 56 lodges, with a roll last month of 1951 members and a benefit reserve of almost $50,000.

In addition to her speech on the question of amalgamation, Mrs. Olson responded to the address of welcome given by Mrs. Margaret Herris, past chief of honor. Mrs. Ada Kuykendall, of Eugene, also spoke. Mrs. Sadie E. Moore, of Corvallis, grand chief of honor, presided.

Starting at 8:30 P. M., a drill team of 18 women under a captain brought down from Eugene, exemplified the full ritualistic work of the order for the initiation of members.

Following the business today, the most important of which will be the election of officers, members of both orders will tour the city and the surrounding neighborhood on chartered streetcars.

The present grand lodge officers are: Mrs. Harrie C. Looney, Jefferson, past grand chief of honor; Mrs. Sadie E.

Are You Tired

of the deadening grind; of the unequal struggle to make both ends meet; of the every-day response to the factory whistle or of taking your place at the desk or behind the counter?

That day that you have so often given thought to, when you will be able to "break clear" and get away from the nerve-racking rush and the clatter and din—to get out into the country. Are you any nearer the realization of your dream now than you were a year ago or ten years ago? That's the question.

For the man of the city—the man of small means, who is striving earnestly but really never getting on; who chafes under the restraint of city employment and city life; who is seeking comfort and happiness rather than great financial reward, we believe we have just the very best—most liberal kind of a proposition. It's a tract of land, say ten acres or more, down at where facilities and conditions are ideal for a farm and orchard home—the richest soil, pure water, abundance of fuel, good roads, delightful surroundings, splendid transportation facilities by rail and water within a comparatively short distance, rural free delivery, schools, etc. Consider these facts and the fact, too, that many of those who have taken up tracts here are already located on and are clearing and developing them. The present low prices are—

and terms to suit. Intelligent investigation of this fertile section and comparison of prices, terms and advantages offered elsewhere, will reveal the merits of Columbia Acres. Get acquainted with us—learn how easy we've made it for you to own one of these tracts of rich farm and orchard land.

CITY'S STORY TO BE TOLD

Greater Portland Plans Committee to Issue 25,000 Booklets.

The Portland City Council will have printed 25,000 45-page booklets, showing the Bennett Greater Portland plans, a description of the city and of proposed improvements, if the recommendations of a committee of the Greater Portland Plans Association are carried out.

At a meeting of the committee yesterday it was decided that the contract for the printing of the booklets should be let to Wells & Co., the price being $180. The books will be 3x12 inches in size. It is expected they will be off the press in 60 days.

This committee was appointed by the Executive Board to pass upon a number of printing bids. Nine bids were received, and the prices ranged from $155 to $197.25, the Chausse-Pudhomme Company being the highest bidder. The average of the bids was $180.

BRIDGE IS ALMOST READY

Contractor Doing Final Work on Upper Roadway and Draws Work.

For the first time the upper draw span and the underslung floor system, on which railroad equipment will cross, were lowered into place yesterday on the new Harriman bridge, and all is in readiness for trains to cross, except that track connections remain to be finished in the yards of the Northern Pacific Terminal Company.

Robert Wakefield, the contractor who erected the steel, has turned the bridge over to the O. W. R. & N., and has but a few men laboring there, they being on the upper deck or roadway completing the laying of planking and finishing the painting. The rail connections being laid on the West Side are said to be but temporary and changes will be made when the old Steel bridge is torn out. In a few days the new crossing will be in service, and the railroad interests will have six months from that time in which to remove the Steel bridge.
