lyng dead at the morgue, as the result of injuries sustained in a mysterious manner, and the police are trying to locate the stranger who took him to the Multnomah County Hospital in a large automobile early Sunday morning, and then hurried away without explanation.

Whatever agency caused the death of Baker, it must have included a blow of terrific force. The bones of his jaws were shattered, several teeth were dislodged, and the skull was fractured at the base of the brain.

According to attendants at the hospital, a large touring car drove up to the entrance about 1:10 A. M. Sunday morning, and the driver, who was identified, and the skull was fractured at the base of the brain.

After hasty treatment had been given Baker, the city physician was notified. The hospital authorities were told to send the man to St. Vincent's Hospital, and he died shortly after being placed in the ambulance, 20 minutes after having been received at the hospital.

Knife Bears Name "A. Baker." Baker was evidently a laboring man. In his pockets were found 35 cents in change, a knife bearing the name "A. Baker" on it, and a round brass check bearing the number 16.

Baker was about 35 years old, five feet eight inches tall and rather stout. He was smooth shaven and of rather clean-cut appearance. He wore a pair of blue serge trousers, with narrow hadrimed coat. He wore a new pair of cheap black shoes, No. 8 size, and had a red neck tie and a soft gray felt hat, which was in good condition.

Hospital Is Telephoned. Detective Heliyer was assigned to the case yesterday, but failed to secure an identification of either the dead man or of his companion.

Telephone Inquiry Made. It was reported at the Multnomah County Hospital yesterday evening that a man's voice had called over the telephone and inquired how "Adam Baker" was getting along.

The fact that the man who called over the telephone last night asked for "Adam Baker" coupled with the finding of the name "A. Baker" on the knife, in the possession of the dead man, apparently established his identity so far as the name is concerned.

MYSTERY ENFOLDS DEATH OF UNKNOWN

SKULL AND JAW FRACTURED

Victim of Fight—Patient Telephone Call Received From Unidentified Man.

A man of about 35 years, who, from the only direct clues in the hands of the police, is evidently Adam Baker, is lying dead at the morgue, as the result of injuries sustained in a mysterious manner, and the police are trying to locate the stranger who took him to the Multnomah County Hospital in a large automobile early Sunday morning, and then hurried away without explanation.

Whatever agency caused the death of Baker, it must have included a blow of terrific force. The bones of his jaws were shattered, several teeth were dislodged, and the skull was fractured at the base of the brain.

According to attendants at the hospital, a large touring car drove up to the entrance about 1:10 A. M. Sunday morning, and the driver, who was identified, and the skull was fractured at the base of the brain.

Baker was about 35 years old, five feet eight inches tall and rather stout. He was smooth shaven and of rather clean-cut appearance. He wore a pair of blue serge trousers, with narrow hadrimed coat. He wore a new pair of cheap black shoes, No. 8 size, and had a red neck tie and a soft gray felt hat, which was in good condition.

Hospital Is Telephoned. Detective Heliyer was assigned to the case yesterday, but failed to secure an identification of either the dead man or of his companion.

Telephone Inquiry Made. It was reported at the Multnomah County Hospital yesterday evening that a man's voice had called over the telephone and inquired how "Adam Baker" was getting along.

The fact that the man who called over the telephone last night asked for "Adam Baker" coupled with the finding of the name "A. Baker" on the knife, in the possession of the dead man, apparently established his identity so far as the name is concerned.

The Portland directory contains no name of A. Baker which could be connected with the dead man.

The theory of the police is that Baker was struck by the driver of the automobile as he was going home, and then, fearful of publicity, and not thinking him seriously injured, the driver made an agreement with the injured man to say that he had been hurt some other way. He was under the influence of liquor when taken to the hospital, and it is pointed out that while in this condition he probably got in the way of the automobile, and was struck.

At the Multnomah County Hospital he seemed dazed, but spoke to Dr. B. L. Brook, an internic, who attended him. "I was hurt in a fight at Third and Morrison streets," he told Dr. Brook, when questioned as to how he sustained his injuries.

Although the police have made inquiry they could learn of no fight in that vicinity late Saturday night. He had been coached to say this, the police think.

When the man who brought the victim to the hospital left, he said hastily, "I'll call around and see you tomorrow."

The car approached the hospital on Second street, from the north. When it left it went north a short distance and then turned in its tracks and proceeded south. From this fact, the police argue that the occupant evidently lived in the South Portland district.

This theory appears further strengthened by the fact that the man was aware of the location of the hospital. The location is an obscure one and not generally known.

The fact that the dead man was struck by the automobile seems to be substantiated by the dust which was found on his clothing.

Foul Play Is Probable. The police do not adhere entirely to the accident story, however. They think foul play is possible. If struck by the car, the effect of the collision upon the man must have been peculiar.

The only way in which the injuries can be accounted for, in that event, is that the body was thrown against some object with terrific force, in such a manner as to come in contact with the jaw.

No kick or blow of the fist could ever have caused those injuries," said Dr. Ziegler, after a post-mortem examination. "Even should he have been struck with some blunt instrument of great weight, the force with which it was wielded must have been so great that it is scarcely credible a man could survive it."

The police have managed to secure a good description of the car and of its occupant and expect soon to locate both.

The man that accompanied Baker to the hospital was about 6 feet tall, and slim. He was of sandy complexion and wore a gray suit.

CHILDREN REQUIRE CARE

Y. M. C. A. SNEAKERS DISCUSS INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS. Necessity of Caring for Feeble-Minded and Preventing Propagation Is Urged.

That it is false economy for the State of Oregon to fail adequately to provide for all its feeble-minded was the statement of John W. Kilpatrick, Y. M. C. A. speaker, at the meeting yesterday afternoon. He is the traveling agent for the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. M. Estes Snicker, an attorney, referred incidentally to laws governing the labor of women in Oregon.

He said, women may work not more than nine hours a day, and children ten hours, but children under 16 years of age may not work later than 7 P. M.

"It is a burning shame," said Mr. Kilpatrick, "that usually in Oregon are admitted feeble-minded children to roam at large. I can take you into schools and homes in this city where there are feeble-minded children who might be in an institution where they can be properly cared for. We have a home, but hundreds are on the waiting list. It is false economy to allow these children to roam at large."

"We have in the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society a number of children who are abnormal, and who ought to be removed from the State, as the result of hereditary influences.

"Poverty is one of the leading causes of crime. We don't have as much of it as the East, and the East, and whether we ever do will depend upon our industrial conditions.

"The majority of children who come to us are from broken homes. I can't understand how women can get the idiotic idea of marrying men to reform them. It usually results in breaking up the family. We need to see that the environment of the children is what it should be, by preventing unfit persons from marrying. It is appalling at times by the absolute indifference of parents in regard to their children.
