

KILLING OF HUNTER LEADS TO INQUIRY

House and State Department Aroused Over Shooting of American.

REDRESS MAY BE ASKED

Rights of British Soldiers to Slay Poacher Without Trial at Issue. Belgium May Be Involved as Death Was on Belgian Soil.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Representative Norris, introduced a resolution today requesting the President to send to the House all information he has regarding the case of James Wood Rogers, a Californian, who was killed in the Central African jungles as the result of a hunt of British soldiers who were ordered to kill or capture him. The resolution was referred to the foreign affairs committee.

Full Facts Are Wanted. The resolution follows: "Resolved, That the President of the United States be and he is hereby requested, if more incompatible with the public interest, to transmit to the House of Representatives all information that may be in his possession or in the possession of the Department of State in regard to the killing of James W. Rogers, an American citizen, by British soldiers in Africa, and to inform the House of Representatives of what action the Department has taken or is contemplated to investigate the killing of the said James W. Rogers."

Shooting Regarded as Outrage. Mr. Norris said he regarded the shooting as an outrage on an American citizen so far as available information shows. He said it seemed that Rogers, an American, charged with offenses that did not warrant killing him, was fatally shot under ironclad orders of the British government carried out on Belgian soil. At the State Department, which has no direct information of the tragedy, it was said that the House resolution would have to be made the basis of an inquiry directed to the American Embassy in London. The Embassy, it was said, would have no difficulty in securing access to the report of the British surgeon on the tragedy.

Regarding the right of British soldiers to kill a poacher without trial, officials of the State Department would express no opinion. Belgium May Be Involved. The question reported to have been raised by Rogers as he was dying, of the right of the British troops to attack him on Belgian soil, complicates the case, though the issue involved would appear to concern Great Britain and Belgium, according to unofficial opinions of department heads.

It should be pointed out, that Rogers was killed in Belgian territory and there was any ground for demanding redress, the United States might look to Belgium instead of Great Britain for justice, leaving Belgium to seek reparation from Great Britain.

BECKER IS INDICTED

New York Grand Jury Also Finds Against 4 Gunmen.

TWO OTHERS ARE CHARGED

Gangsters Are "Lefty Louie," "Whitely" Lewis, "Dago Frank" and "Gip the Blood"—Sullivan and Shapiro Are Included.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A blanket indictment charging murder in the first degree was returned by the grand jury late this afternoon against Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and four gangsters in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

The gangsters indicted are "Lefty Louie," "Whitely" Lewis, "Dago Frank" and "Gip the Blood." Sullivan and Shapiro are included.

Rose Not Indicted. The grand jury refused to return indictments against Sam Schepps, Jack Rose, "Bridgie" Webber, Harry Vailon and Louis Libby, who are being held as material witnesses.

An unexpected witness before the grand jury today was "Big Jack" Zellig, now out on bail awaiting trial for carrying concealed weapons. It was learned of these reports that Zellig was brought before the grand jury because of his alleged involvement in the murder of Rosenthal.

The appearance at the Courthouse of Zellig caused a sensation. Former Police Magistrate Wable, who was "Big Jack's" counsel when he was released on bail, revealed the fact that his client had been arrested last Thursday at Providence, R. I. Wable intimated that Zellig had been apprehended on a trivial charge through an understanding between the police of New York and Providence.

Becker's "Press Agent" Heard. Other witnesses examined today were the clerk of a hotel at Far Rockaway, where the gunmen celebrated after the shooting, and a photographer who made a group picture of them there. Detective Cassasa testified in regard to the police hunt for the murder suspects. Charles B. Pitt, described as Becker's "press agent," also testified.

These witnesses, it was said, completed the testimony desired by the District Attorney and a photographer who presented a blanket indictment.

Schepps' counsel, Bernard Sandier, declared that his client would make a clean breast of everything. Two more banks have been found where Lieutenant Becker had money on deposit. These, it was said, brought the total of Becker's deposits up to $50,000.

LITTLE GIRL IS MURDERED

other than a few convulsive movements of the arms. There is hardly a clew to how the murderer entered the house and a bucket of potatoes holding the room screen door open only tells how he left. When Mr. Green arose this morning he says he noticed the door one-third open and a bucket of potatoes holding the screen door back. Entrance may have been made the same way, as the screen door was found unlatched and a broken glass in the door would have made possible the turning of the key after a cloth had been turned aside.

The grieving father believes the murderer was concealed somewhere within the house when he locked the doors for the night and sent his daughter to bed at 10:30 o'clock.

childish good night and in her snowy white night dress, her soft locks floating down her back had sauntered off into the corner of the house where she slept.

As the prostrated father views it now, the demon lay hidden somewhere about as the child knelt before the white spreads of the destined death bed and repeated her last prayers. Mr. Green in another room, sat and read as he heard the bed creak and the little form tumble into its resting place among the downy coverlets.

For several hours he sat there and at midnight retired. This morning, the horrible dawning of what had transpired in the few hours that intervened between midnight and 5 o'clock offered a pitiable contrast.

Mr. Green, as is his usual custom, arose about 5 o'clock, started the fire, and prepared for his breakfast and the weekly washing. Several times he had called the child, as was his custom. When she failed to respond the last time, he started for her room. As he ascended the stairs and approached her room he saw the dainty leg hanging over the edge of the bed. A second step toward the door revealed a shocking sight. There in a pool of blood gleaming under the rays of the morning sunlight lay the beloved child, her dainty and fair features set firm in the last death struggle, the mellow like hair floating off across the blood-stained bed coverlet. Her scant night clothes torn and distorted.

Father Calls Neighbors. Whether the girl in terror had started to spring from the bed and was forcibly thrown back or whether she was slain instantly as she slept beneath the sheets and later pulled under by the assassin the coronator's jury was unable to determine. On this point is evident. The assassin killed the girl and when she was dying and after the life spark had been utterly extinguished violated her youthful body. This fact has been brought out by physicians and surgeons who have examined the body.

When the crime was discovered by the father this morning he rushed in terror to the house of neighbors. With them he entered the room for the second time to establish what he hoped was a vision. The child was dead on the second time that his daughter had been the victim of an inconceivable outrage he lost control and was taken in charge by the neighbors. Later he became frantic, and a police officer exercised to prevent his mental torture becoming fatal.

At the inquest in the afternoon he was able to give a comparatively coherent account of the crime as he discovered it. He related how he had taken his daughter to Junction City to be visited by her mother. She had through the sermon which he preached there Sunday and had returned again with him to his modest little Sixth-street home Monday evening. He related anew the songs he carelessly chanted while he was busying himself about the house that evening and the careful prattle of the child on the eve of her death. He rehearsed the usual evening scripture reading before she went to her bed, the good-night kiss and all.

Negro Is Sought. A most pathetic part of his story of the crime is the fact that during the early morning hours before he had discovered the girl, and while she lay in the pool of blood, he was working in the kitchen and lower floor of the house, singing and anxiously awaiting her coming, when they could breakfast together.

With the awful aspect of the crime fully realized Eugene has set about to run down the negro, who he believes being imported and every device through which the murderer could escape is being sewed up.

That the crime was committed by a negro, who hid in the fruit cellar first and later in the clothes closet off the victim's room, is more firmly believed by the authorities tonight after a day of search. The hound had been baffled in their scent on the outside by the many footprints in the garden and home grounds covered by visitors to the scene of the tragedy. The authorities, however, to get the dogs on a true scent before morning.

R. Morgan, a brakeman in a work-train, notified the authorities from Roseburg today that he saw a negro attempt to catch a train as it left Eugene this morning at 9 o'clock. He said the negro failed to get aboard and dodged under a warehouse. Morgan says he can identify the negro. He will return to Eugene tomorrow to assist the officers.

Night clerks in the postoffice say they saw a man, supposedly a negro, rush for a train, and while they have only an outline of his form, may be able to lend valuable assistance to the officers.

Rev. Mr. Green and his family came to Eugene from Iowa 11 years ago. Mrs. Green died in 1909, after a lingering illness with cancer, and since then the three daughters have kept house for their father and brother. The other children are Rhoda, Paul and Lois, who have been visiting in St. Louis. They will arrive in several days.

SAN FRANCISCO IS SAFE FROM FEE

Experts Say Invaders Would Need to Outnumber Defenders Six to One.

MANEUVERS ARE AT END

War Game Is Concluded With All-Day Battle 75 Miles South of City Now Threatened by Theoretical Enemy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—The war is over. San Francisco is safe. From early morning until 11 o'clock this afternoon the red army of invasion and the blue army of defense engaged in battle near Coyote, about 75 miles south of this city, in the Santa Clara Valley. The chief umpire blew his whistle at 2 o'clock, declared it a drawn battle and the war was officially at an end.

The maneuvers, which were under the direction of Brigadier-General Walter S. Schuyler, U. S. A., were arranged to work out the problem whether a foreign foe landing on the shores of Monterey Bay could march northward and capture San Francisco.

Regulars Defend City. The forces that comprised the army of invasion, known as the reds, under the command of Brigadier-General Robert Wankowski, of the National Guard of California, were composed of guardsmen of this state and Utah. The blue army of defense was composed mostly of regiments of the regular army with a few guardsmen from Utah and the cavalry of the National Guard of California.

The maneuvers began ten days ago and the two forces advanced toward Coyote by easy stages. A force of the blue army commanded by Colonel W. H. C. Brown, U. S. A., had been driven from Presidio Monterey by the red army and impeded its advance. This small force harassed the reds until the day preceding the battle and last night joined the main army.

Defense Almost Impregnable. Army experts said after the battle that the blue army had occupied such a strong strategic position that an army of invaders as large as that of the reds could not have broken through the lines and marched on San Francisco. Such an attempt would have resulted in the red army's being wiped out.

The blue army was under the command of Colonel Cornelius Gardener, Sixteenth Infantry, U. S. A. The chief umpire of the maneuvers was Lieutenant-Colonel Charles H. Barth, Twelfth Infantry, U. S. A.

The Utah National Guardsmen entrained tonight and left for their homes. The California guardsmen will entrain tomorrow and the regulars will march to their home posts.

BRIBE TRAP DESCRIBED

DETECTIVE TESTIFIES IN DETROIT SCANDAL.

"Honest Tom" Glinnan Declared to Have Confessed When Confronted by Burns.

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—The testimony of William J. Brennan, a private detective, was the feature of the Police Court examination today of "Honest Tom" Glinnan, the first of the 18 Aldermen recently arrested on bribery charges to be tried in court.

Brennan went into the details of the trapping of the Alderman up to the time he alleges that he, representing Wabash Railroad, paid Glinnan $1000 for his influence in granting the railroad's request for the use of the street for building purposes.

Brennan first got acquainted with the different Aldermen; of impressing upon them the urgent desire of the railroad for the rights of the street, and was expressed by several of the Councilmen. Finally, he testified, Glinnan went to his office and arrangements were made for the closing of the street.

At last, he said, all arrangements were complete for the payment of the bribe money. It had been planned to bring Glinnan to the office and get there before the money was handed over. Glinnan was to go last and get what was left, which Brennan had told him would be at least $1000.

According to the testimony, Glinnan appeared promptly on July 26 for the money. "I took out a roll of bills," the witness said, "and counted them. I said, 'Glinnan, here's the $1000 that I promised you for voting for the Wabash closing.' He thanked me and put the money in his left inside pocket. As he left I took him into the next room. Mr. Burns was there."

The witness then testified that Glinnan, when he realized his situation, handed back the money and made a confession.
