TICKET LINE LONG

Seat Buyers for Baker Season Wait All Night.

THREE WOMEN IN VANGUARD

These Hold Places 26 Hours, With Brief Intermissions - Line Extends Down Eleventh Street to Alder as Sale Opens

Three women, who had held places in line since a o'clock Tuesday morning, were the first purchasers at the Baker Theater box office yesterday morning of season reservations for the new stock company's engagement, which opens next Monday.

These three women were tired and heavy-eyed, but they obtained the seats they wanted and nailed their seats for the season, and they expressed themselves as satisfied and pleased. They had brought campatools when they took their places to head the line and they had held them steadily for 26 hours, except for brief intermissions, when relatives had relieved them while they went out for meals and exercise.

Score Wait All Night.

In the fore ranks of the long line which Treasurer Lee H. Pearl looked out upon when he threw up the box effice window at 10 oclock yesterday, were a full score of other tired-eyed people who had spent a night in line, and behind them, reaching out through the lobby and down along the Eleventh-street sidewalk to Alder street, were banked in close single, file, other anxious would-be purchasers.

These patient vigil-keepers were rapidly disposed of and went away with their coveted reservations, but others followed them. They came so fast and kept Pearl so busy that by midafternoon he was gasping and had to signal Milton Seaman to come to his relief for a time.

Mallear and Robbing Passengers.

"Gee!" said Pearl, mopping the per-spiration from his brow and adjusting his soaked collar, "that's some work. But say," he called to Manager Baker, But say," he called to Mamager Baker, who had just entered, "look at that cash drawer. She's full. That's sales-manship, ch?"

"Yes, Lee," replied Manager Baker, "you're a clever salesman all right. But don't get swelled up, my boy. Could you have prevented the people from buying them by any measure short of locking up the window and going home? I trow not. Don't feel badly, though. It's a good day's work."

Crowd Is Good-Natured.

"Goodness:" ejaculated a woman who had been carrying on an animated visit with two friends in line last evening. "What time is it? Seven o'clock? Well did you ever! Here I've been since 5 o'clock and it's dinner time and not a thing cooked in the house. What will my husband say?" And she ran to hall a passing car amid general laughter.
"Just like the old Third street days."
