Captain Bill Rodgers' broken ankle may have slowed him up the forepart of the year, but he is still good to his wife and he can still sting the ball. His triple, followed by Krueger's single in the eighth inning yesterday, broke up a beautiful 1-to-1 tie, and a pitcher with a polysyllabic name—viz. Higginbotham—wen a sensational and justly earned game over Oakland, 2 to 1.

2 to 1.

Higginbotham was as tight as a hobble skirt after he got warmed up. He was outpitched the first four innings by "Bud" Pernoll, but after that not a Commuter registered a safe hit and only two reached first base. It was Hig,'s double, too, a few inches inside the first base line, that tied the score in the seventh inning. Baker had preceded by a slash through Tiedemann. Oaks' Lend Cut Down.

Oaks' Lead Cut Down.

Thus it is that Oakland's lead in the Coast pennant race reverts to three and one-half games over Los Angeles, while Portland can crow over two victories out of three in the last home series. One game will be played today, and two Sunday, so if the Beavers grab one of the trio the worst they can get is an even break.

The last ladies' day of the year found nearly 2000 gay hits of pulchritude huddled in the capacious stands. As a consequence the players were on dress rehearsal, and even the newspaper men in the press box disported gaudy headgear and fountain pens. There was just enough excitement sprinkled through the nine innings to alleviate the call for footwarmers.

through the fine infinity to directive the call for footwarmers.

The Oaks filled the bases twice in the third inning, an infield single and two bunts doing the preliminary work, but, nithough nobody was out, one run was all they could squeeze in. Pernoll singled through second, Leard and Abbott both heat out puny attempted sacsingled through second, Leard and As-bott both beat out puny attempted sac-rifices to shortstop, Bancroft retired Abbott at second on Zacher's grounder and Pernoll scored. Coy walked, fill-ing the bases and Hetling lined out to Krueger, who drove Leard back to third by a swell throw to the plate. Cook forced Zacher at third, retiring the side.

Tiedemann Saves Runs. Portland also jammed the bases in the third inning on Higginbotham's initial single, an error by Cook and Rodgers' hit to Hetling, but with two out Tiedemann speared a drive off Krueger's stick and flagged impending danger.

GIANT GOOD BASE STEALER

Wood Is Star Man With Ray Collins Runking an Easy Second as Slabman -- Mathewson Is Mc-Graw's Mainstay.

While baseball statistics, eagerly scanned by fandom in a search for corscanned by fandom in a search for corroborative world's series argument, show that the New York Giants are superior to the Boston Red Sox in the base-stealing department of the National game, it cannot but be conceded that in the more important matter of better bulwarked.

Boston has four pitchers whose records would indicate that they can hold their own against the Giants. These men are Wood, Collins, Bedient and O'Brien. New York's three prospects are Mathewson, Tesreau and Marquard. A Mathewson of a few years ago or a Marquard of the early 1912 season would undoubtedly add sufficient strength to New York to place them on a level with Boston as a betting proposition, if not install McGraw's club favorite. But since Marquard's wonderful winning streak was broken on July 8 he has degenerated into a mediocre performer, losing more games than he has won. Mathewson, who was equal to repeating on the second day equal to repeating on the second day seven years ago against Boston, is now only a great pitcher for five or six in-nings, and is then only an average slab-ster, and capable of only two pitching duels in a world's series.

Tesreau in Limelight.

This leaves Jeff Tesreau, the big spitball heaver of the Giants, the man upon whom the hopes of New York fans are centered. His ability to stand up under the terrific strain of a world's series, and the efficiency of his delivery against batsmen who have held their own against the redoubtable Ed Walsh, are matters of grave conjecture.

Tesreau is a wonderful pitcher in a league which frowns upon the spitball artist. On the other hand, he is to pit "eel" ball against batsmen who encounter the unsanitary spitter every few lays during a season. The series will one in a league where opposition is weak.

Taking it for granted that National League batters fall prey to the spitball easier than the Americans, "Buck" O'Brien, the Boston spitball hurler, should make as good if not a better showing against New York than Tesreau will against Boston, and this despite the fact that his record for the season is not nearly so good as that of Tesreau.

Granting, for the sake of argument, that O'Brien, who ranks third if not fourth in the Boston mound quartet of "hopes," is equal to Tesreau, the big "hope" of the Giants, it is not so difficult to understand why buseball people have installed the Red Sox warm favorites over the Giants for the 1912 world's baseball itife.

Despite his waning strength Christy Mathewson, the peerless "Big Six." will undoubtedly be the New York box mainstay during the titanic baseball struggle. He may prove no better than last year, but his cunning, ability to husband his strength and uncanny knowledge of the batting weaknesses of his opponents, makes him the logical twirling leader of the Gianta.

of them were caught trying to steal second base. Houck caught two men napping at first and Zagan caught a runner off third, thus spoiling their chances. The home team tested Carrigan's throwing arm and four times in five attempts the Boston backstop was successful in catching baserunners.
