had refused to speak to him on the street after the moral squad started "jugging" the state's witnesses against Krasner. Swennes was called and ridiculed this testimony, declaring that if he had overlooked speaking to Long it was not intentional. He said that he has no animosity whatever toward the members of the moral squad.

"If this jury should acquit Krasner on this charge I will bring him to trial on the other extortion indictment, in which Max Wagman is the complaining witness, and will ask Mayor Rushlight and Chief of Police Slover to come here and listen to how their policemen seek to block the wheels of justice by testifying in favor of a macquereaux," said Deputy District Attorney Collier.
