LINCOLN HIGH OPENED
 NEW BUILDING IS INSPECTED BY THOUSANDS.
 Wallace McCamant Delivers Address on Life of Lincoln and Orchestra Gives Programme.
 With an interesting programme of music and patriotic speeches the new Lincoln High School building, on Seventh and Market streets, was formally opened last night. Thousands of persons visited the magnificent new structure and went through the various rooms. The programme of the affair took place in the main assembly-room which was crowded to capacity.
 The address of the evening was delivered by Wallace McCamant who spoke of the life of Lincoln. "No better idea could be conceived than to name this new school after that great patriot," he said. "He represented everything that is noble in life and that is what the school we are now dedicating should represent. The name is extremely fitting."
 H. C. Campbell, chairman of the Board of Education, delivered the address of welcome and explained the features of the new building. He announced that the total cost was $425,000 after the amount received for another high school site was deducted.
 An excellent programme was given by the Lincoln High School orchestra led by Dr. E. Chapman, director of music in the public schools. A number of classical pieces were played and several solos given during the evening.
 Particularly interesting was the display of the school of trades in the basement of the building. All manner of interesting samples of work being done by the students were on exhibition in this department.
