

INSIDE SUSTAINED PARTY, SAYS WILSON

Candidate Declares Democracy Is Awaiting Attention of American People.

INTRODUCTION IS MADE

Speaking at Cleveland, Candidate Says Organization Has Been Preserved From Alliance With Special Privilege.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 11.—"The vision of the Democratic party," which he declared had been preserved from alliance with and domination by special privilege, was the burden of an address here tonight by Governor Woodrow Wilson.

"It has been here all along," he said, "but you weren't paying any attention. You are just now beginning to take notice, because there was a solid phalanx, a solid organized rush line, between you and the horizon. The whole horizon was shut out from you by the towering figures of men who held closely and firmly together in order to dominate the situation. But now their lines are broken, a little bit of the horizon can be glimpsed, and beyond these towering figures you see the great resurgent mass of the American people; and you see that great mass, I hope modest gentlemen, trying to speak for them, saying:

"We have been waiting for your attention for a long time; now will you be kind enough to attend? Will you be kind enough to realize what we are doing? Will you be kind enough to open your eyes to the vision which has led us on through dark days for a whole generation?"

Where Spirit Finds Its Food. "For we would not have carried this burden of exile if we had not seen a vision. We could not have done it; we could have got into the game; we could have surrendered and made terms; we could have played the role of patriots in the next generation; we could have dominated the interest of the country; and here and there gentlemen who pretended to be Democrats did make those arrangements; but they were not some of them; I have known them. They couldn't stand the privation. There was too little in it. You never can stand it unless you have some imperishable food within you upon which to sustain life and courage, the food of those visions of the spirit where a table is set before you loaded with palatable fruits, the fruits of hope, the fruits of imagination—those invisible things of the spirit which are the only things upon which we carry ourselves through this weary world without fainting.

"I want to introduce you to the present Democratic party," he continued, "a party that has come through fire, has been purified, has been shown such errors as it has committed in past years, and is now absolutely and enthusiastically united upon a progressive programme, a platform such as the whole country now desires to see carried out. This is the new Democratic party, now because it never grows old; new because the principles in which it is rooted and grounded never can grow old. This is the party which is being questioned with regard to its purposes by the leaders of parties which are either breaking up or have not yet attained to the bone and sinew of manhood.

Free Trade Ancient Bogey. "These gentlemen are saying: 'If you give power to the Democrats you will run into evil days. For one thing you will have free trade.' Ah, that ancient bogey! How long will they continue to dress this thing of their imagination in the old clothes of antiquated stump orators? There cannot be free trade in the United States so long as the established fiscal policy of the Federal Government is maintained. The Federal Government has chosen that path, and all the generations that have preceded us to maintain itself chiefly on indirect interest of direct taxation. I dare say we shall never see a time when it will alter that policy in any substantial degree; and there is no Democrat of prudence or thoughtfulness that I have met who contemplates a programme of free trade.

"But what we have been doing, and what we intend to do, what the House of Representatives has just passed, is to do and will attempt to do again, and we succeed, is to weed this garden of industry that we have been cultivating. If we have been laying at the roots of our industrial enterprises, this fertilization of protection, we have found that the stimulation was not equal in respect of all the growths in the garden, and that there are some growths which every man can distinguish with the naked eye, which have so overtopped the rest which have so thrown the rest into destroying shadow, which it is impossible for the industries of the United States as a whole to prosper under their desolating obstruction. We are going into our gardens, therefore, and we are going to give the little plants air and light in which to grow. We are going to pull up every root that grows in any narrow sense, as to draw all the nutriment of the soil from the other plants. We are going to see to it that fertilization of intelligence, of invention, of origination, is once more applied to a set of industries now threatening to be stagnant, because threatening to be too much concentrated.

Certainty of Law Demanded. "The difference between the Democratic and the Republican parties, or rather between the Democratic party and those various groups and parties of parties that are masquerading under all sorts of names is that they are willing to accept the discretionary power of individuals, and they are not willing to accept anything except the certainty of law. That is the only thing that has ever afforded salvation or safety.

"I want to draw a few illustrations. There is the great policy of conservation, for example; and I do not conceive of conservation in any narrow sense. There are the lives and fortunes of the citizens of the United States to be conserved. Conservation covers not only forest reserves and forest cultivation and the safeguarding of water powers and mines, but it includes pure food and the public health and the conditions of labor and all those things which government must see to minutely and courageously, if we are not to be sapped of our vitality and disappointed of our hopes. Now, the thing that stands in the way of the proper policy of conservation and makes it impossible to form that policy is that the government of the United States is now under the influence of men who want to control the forests, control the water courses, control the mines, who will not admit that these are public properties which we hold in trust for future generations as well as for ourselves, and who are resisting the efforts of those of us who would extend the threads of law all through those industrial processes which threaten our resources and threaten our lives and vitality.

Demands to Be Removed. "Then there is the matter of the regulation of the hours of labor, of the conditions of labor, the question of the sanitation of factories, of the limitation of the hours of work for women and children, of the limitation of hours for men, questions which are in part state questions but also in part Federal questions. All of these matters have to be treated by knowledge and pursued by a constancy of purpose which no special interests ought to be allowed to stand in the way of. The government of the United States under the Democratic party will attempt to put all through this Nation the structural basis so that no man can doubt what his rights are, or doubt the stability of the thing that he is dealing on.

"What I want to suggest to you is that the only basis, the only standard, of readjustment proposed or suggested by our opponents is the standard of expediency, and that only the Democratic party offers a standard of principle. The expediency of the situation is merely to see to it that those who receive special privileges behave themselves, whereas our principle is that nobody ought to receive or retain special privileges at all—that every special privilege shall be destroyed, not with a ruthless hand, not in such fashion as suddenly to upset the conditions of business, but nevertheless with the firmness and kindness of the judicious parent. For the Government of the United States at present is a mere foster child of the special interests. It is not allowed to have a will of its own. It is told at every move. 'Don't do that. You will interfere with our prosperity.' When we ask, 'where is our prosperity lodged,' a certain group of gentlemen say, 'with us.'

Nation Needs a Guardian. "Now, I for my part, don't want to belong to a Nation, and take leave prettily to believe that I do not belong to a Nation, that needs to be taken care of by guardians. I want to belong to a Nation that knows how to take care of itself.

"It would seem as if America were about to see a generation grow up which must be a generation of employees, unless it makes up its mind to be a generation of masters. The great militant, fighting, triumphant America the world has known and admired is a Nation of officers, a Nation of men who are their own masters, a Nation of men who originate their own processes of industry and of life, and we shall never see the day, I confidently predict, where America will allow itself to be employed and patronized and taken care of."

LORIMER DEFENDS SELF DEPOSED SENATOR TO DEVOTE LIFE TO VINDICATION.

Lecture Tour to Be Made in Effort to Rehabilitate Himself in State Politically.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—(Special.)—William Lorimer, deposed Senator from Illinois, is going to devote the rest of his life, if necessary, to an effort to vindicate himself before the American people.

"If I am allowed ten years more," said he, "and my health permits, I shall bring about a complete personal vindication of myself."

Lorimer is going to begin his campaign in the next few weeks by talking to the lecture platform. In Washington today to prepare the evidence and material for a series of lectures, which he plans to deliver in Illinois. It will be his first move in an effort to rehabilitate himself politically and to vindicate his title as a senator.

The Senator from Illinois said the fight might take him 10 years, but if longer time were necessary he would continue his efforts until the end. Lorimer in making his speeches will not go outside Illinois, but he intends that before he is through nearly every body in the commonwealth shall have heard Lorimer's version of this trial from his own lips.

Curt A. Dieelman, clerk in another hotel in Los Angeles, said he had a conversation with "Bric" who registered there September 29. That was the second day before the Los Angeles explosion.

"The next night," testified Dieelman, "I talked to Bric, who had been registered from Chicago, and I asked him how things were out there. He told me he was going to San Francisco that night, and wanted to know whether he would have to pay for another night because he was going to remain until 7 o'clock. He checked out at 7 o'clock."

At 7 o'clock the next morning the explosion occurred. According to telegrams produced by the Government, McManara was 15 miles away, en route to Salt Lake City, where, it is charged, he was kept in hiding by J. E. Munsey, a former business agent of the Ironworkers' Union, who telegraphed on to Indianapolis: "Patient out of danger."

Henry Doberber identified a photograph of James E. McManara as having been the "P. Sullivan" who registered in a Chicago hotel about the time an attempt was made to blow up a plant in South Chicago in February, 1911. He can go on to Tulsa, Pittsburg, Boston, Cincinnati and other cities testified as to Ortie E. McManiga's visit to those places at times when he was a member of the dynamiting crew.

MINAMARA TRACE BY HOTEL CLERKS

Government Seeking to Connect Various Accused Men With Conspiracy.

CAPLAN BELIEVED KILLED

Dynamite Prosecution May Explain Mysterious Disappearance of Two Men on Whom Warrants Were Never Served.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 11.—"J. B. Brice, Chicago," the name James B. McManara used to disguise his intention to cause explosions on the Pacific Coast, and particularly in Los Angeles, formed an important point in the testimony at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today.

As tending to sustain its contention that the explosions were part of a conspiracy for the illegal interstate shipment of dynamite, involving the 45 men now on trial, the Government indicated it would go thoroughly into the explosions in the West, possibly throwing light on the mysterious disappearance of F. A. Schmitt and David Caplan, accused accomplices of McManara. Caplan and Schmitt were indicted in Los Angeles on a charge of murder, but they never were discovered. Government agents have received information that Caplan was killed.

Witnesses reading from hotel registers testified concerning the movements of McManara, Schmitt, Caplan and Olaf A. Tveitmo, of San Francisco.

McManara's Movements Traced. From the time he arrived in San Francisco, August 19, 1910, until he left Los Angeles, a few hours before the Los Angeles Times explosion, McManara's whereabouts, with the exception of a few nights, were accounted for by the name "Brice," written on the register. It was this alias which John J. McManara said his brother had used too often, and after the explosion, the authorities had a pretty good description of "Brice."

George A. Dixon, assistant manager of a San Francisco hotel, produced records of "Brice's" register at the hotel in Oakland, August 30 he was traced to Seattle, where he sought from J. D. Wagner, teacher in a technical school, information on how to create a spark without the use of a fulminating cap. Eugene A. Clancy, another labor leader in San Francisco, was in Seattle at that time, the Government asserts. The next day an office building under construction in Seattle was blown up.

Telephone Calls Recorded. Reading from a hotel register, Mr. Dixon told of "Brice's" register in San Francisco, September 14, after he had lived for ten days in a boarding-house. Soon after Mr. Dixon testified, Brice appeared, "Parry," alias Schmitt. They occupied the same room. Records of telephone calls from McManara's room also were produced. These calls, according to the Government's attorneys, concerned the preparations for procuring the explosive that later were taken to Los Angeles.

Caplan then appeared on the scene and the house in San Francisco, at 1635 Nineteenth avenue, where later a quantity of nitro-glycerine was found, was rented.

Walter L. Smith, clerk in a hotel in Los Angeles, identified the signature of "A. Tveitmo," as that of a patron who was in Los Angeles before "Brice" arrived the last time.

Curt A. Dieelman, clerk in another hotel in Los Angeles, said he had a conversation with "Bric" who registered there September 29. That was the second day before the Los Angeles explosion.

"The next night," testified Dieelman, "I talked to Bric, who had been registered from Chicago, and I asked him how things were out there. TRAIN ROBBERS FOILED

Messenger Saves Treasure by Giving Battle.

PORT SMITH, Ark., Oct. 11.—Four robbers bungled a hold-up of a North-bound Kansas City Southern passenger train between Hatfield and Mena, Ark., early today. One was wounded and captured and the other outlaws escaped after a battle with Express Messenger Merrill Murgett, of Kansas City, Mo., in which Burgett exhausted his ammunition and was badly beaten.

Burgett shot the robber, who was discovered an hour later, after his companions had deserted him. Burgett is in a hospital at Mena. He will recover.

While Burgett was working in his car he saw the robbers clambering up to the side door. They smashed the glass with their revolver butts.

Burgett hid his most valuable packages despite the hail of bullets which the bandits poured into the car. The packages hidden, Burgett turned his attention to the invaders. As Burgett fired at them the robbers reached through the smashed window and loosened the catch which held the door from the inside. Then they opened the door and sprang into the car, one by one, firing on Burgett as they advanced.

The fight continued until Burgett's cartridges were gone. Then, outnumbered and overpowered, he gave battle to three, wielding the butt of his shotgun effectively. The robbers clubbed the messenger, repeatedly asking: "Where's that package of money?"

So far as known the outlaws took nothing.

Black Bass Planted in Lakes. BAY CITY, Or., Oct. 11.—(Special.)—State Game Warden Finley is stocking the lakes along the line of the Pacific Railway with Navigation Company with young black bass, taken from the lakes around Portland. About 10,000 bass were planted at Lake Lytle and the same number at Ocean Lake and Park. The fish were about three inches long and stood the transfer from lake to lake in fine shape. At present the lakes are inhabited by trout, but as the bass multiply more rapidly and are more adapted to lake conditions, the change has been made. The bass will exterminate the trout in a season or two.
