COMPLICATIONS, Dec. 21 (Telex).

The situation at Constantinople is now complicated by the Turkish government's agreement to evacuate the Dardanelles to the Allies, and the withdrawal of the Turkish troops from the eastern coast of Asia Minor. The Allies have notified the Turks that they will not be allowed to evacuate the Dardanelles without their consent, and the Turks have resisted this demand. The situation is further complicated by the fact that the Russians are also trying to obtain control of the Dardanelles, and there is a possibility of a war between the Allies and the Russians.
