Madame Carrie B. Bridewell, the Eminent Contralto Who Is Visiting Relatives in This City.

Western Oregon, Western Washington York City, arrived in this city yesterday to pay a visit to her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Bridewell, and two of her sisters, Mrs. Baltis Allen and Mrs. R. O. Goulding. Last night Madame Bridewell and a third sister, Mrs. W. M. Anderson, of Sacramento. Cal., were entertained at the Baltis Allen home on Portland Heights. Song birds may come and song birds may go, but Madame Bridewell stands notable among them as being a prima donna who never gets sick, and never uses drugs—consequently she doesn't suffer from the many colds, throat troubles and headaches that make the life of the average singer a condition life of the average singer a condition of woe and tears.

"The answer is that I am a Christian Scientist," said Madame Bridewell. "God is my health and love rules all. I am never sick—as the world understands the term."

It is not Ernest Bloch, of Aberdeen, is at the other cities in California. It is not likely that Madame Bridewell will be heard in this city at the present time, as her concert dates are arranged far ahead and she wishes a day or two of Albert Dunbar, of Astoria, is at the est to attend a family reunion in this city.

Singer Is Independent.

"I don't have to sing unless I wish to do so," explained Madame Bridewell last night, at her suite in the Multinomah Hotel. "In private life I am Mrs. Lemuel Benedict, and my husband is a Wall street broker, who never per-sonally deals in stock fluctuations on his own behalf. Our home is on Long Island and we have not yet opened our ome in New York City for the season Pive years ago, when my husband and were married, at his request I gave up my professional career as a singer, not that he objected to my continuing in that line, but because he could not accompany me on my tours throughout the country. He has to remain in New York to keep in touch with the money market. "I was content with my quiet home life, until one day I went to the Metro politan Opera House and heard my for-mer associates sing in "Tristan und Isolde." My eyes filled with tears. Not very iong after this my husband and I were guests at Madame Nordica's home, and Nordica asked me to sing. Oh, said I, 'I am through with singing. I never sing now. I'm a married woman.' But Nordica insisted, and I sang. Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt. Belmont and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt took my husband aside and told him that I did not belong to him alone, that I owed a duty to my art and that they and others desired I should return to my professional musical career.

"Well, Mr. Benedict gave his consent after a little while. When I started on this present tour my husband said to me, 'Carrie, if they don't treat you right, just get on a train and come right home. You know you don't have to sing, now, unless you want to."

Madame Bridewell sighed. "Now I am horribly homesick instead of having the longing to sing. I love him devotedly and shall love him all my life stop to the enterprise. It has de-Home Life Ideal.

Madame Bridewell looks hearty and well. Her laugh is like sunshine, and the bloom on her cheeks is as healthyred as an Oregon apple. Her speaking voice is deep, yet softly feminine like the tone of a 'cello.

Four pictures, headed by Opie Reid's The Starbucks," and three good must cal turns, a full hour-and-a-half en-tertainment, gave unalloyed pleasure to a host of Portland picture fans and music lovers at continuous perform-ances at the People's Theater all day yesterday. "The Starbucks" is a two reel special and gives a faithful por-trayal of the story of the book and play, and has the added attraction of having Opie Reid, the author, play the leading role. Another drama and two medies by Keystone, a new brand, made up the photo-play end of the bill. John Auger, a noted 'cello player, was made up the photo-play end of the bill.

John Auger, a noted 'cello piayer, was compelled to give three or four encores every time he appeared. Miss Ella James was retained a second week, as she is the best soprano heard recently in the People's Theater. Brooks and Doyle sang duets and played tinkling gultars. The management announces for next Wednesday "St. George and the Dragon" by the same company which produced Dante's "Inferno." It is a feature in three reels.

"The Peril of the Plains" was featured at the Star and, together with the championship Coast League baseball films and two comedies, also played to the biggest crowds that have attended the Star since the political campaign began. Besides the films, there were Harry Glynn, a noted English singer and entertainer; a clever banjo player and Beverly Ashton, a pretty and winsome soubrette, who sang popular songs with ease grace and enough voice to please. "Peril of the Plains" is an Indian spectacle, where the boys in blue saved the settlers from the savages, and the flag frequently displayed at the head of the rescuing cavalry brought patriotism forth in rich aplause. Next Wednesday "The Glass Coffin." a three-real mystery, will be effered as one of the most fascinating photo plays of the season. That interest in Napoleon has not died out was proved at the Arcade

That interest in Napoleon has not died out was proved at the Arcade Theater yesterday, where "The Emperor's Message," dealing with an episode in the life of the great Frenchman, was made the subject of a really great film. It proved to be the most attractive picture of the whole 4000 feet. "The Newly Weds and Bedella," a farce comedy, was most laughable; King and Lovell, musical ductists, made a large-sized hit, and Scott and Annette, man and woman, European gymnasts, introwoman, European gymnasts, intro-duced some novelties in acrobatics, For length and excellence this show For length and excellence this show has rarely been surpassed in this city.

"On Secret Service," the new tworeel Kay Bee, was the big feature at Sunnyside, and, with three other fine films and Leo Conlin, made up a good show. But, on top of the regular programme, the management put on Harold Yates, the famous mimic whistler and dancer, and this addition gave much pleasure to the patrons.

SEAT SALE TODAY.

Alice Nielsen and Brilliant Company of Singers to Be Heard Wednesday.

This morning at 10 o'clock the Heilig boxoffice opens for the sale of seats for Alice Nielsen and her concert company, who will be heard Wednesday night under the direction of Lois Steers-Wynn Coman. The sparkling lit-tle operetta. "The Barber of Seville." will decupy the latter half of the programme, and the bright music and clever situations which make this one of the most brilliant of light operas will appeal to all lovers of good music. Miss Nielsen is supported by a galaxy of stars, her associates in opera; each one being among the best that America or Europe has to offer in his or her special line of operatic work. Alice Nielsen herself has been developing new power of enchantment both in her art and her appearance has now new power of enchantment both in her art and her personality, and has now become one of the shining lights of the Metropolitan Opera, New York. It is rare indeed for Portland people to have an opportunity of enjoying such talent as will be presented at the Heilig Wed-
