WRITER TELLS OF BULGARS' VICTORY

Observer Says Turks Lost in Battle of Sunday and Monday.

OTTOMAN WINGS BROKEN

Correspondent, Arrested, "Squares" Guards and Stops at Scene of Battle—Terrific Hail of Shot Puts Army to Rout.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Ashmed Bartlett, the war correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, in a dispatch dated November 18, says that the battle before Tchatalja on Sunday and Monday resulted in a great Bulgarian success. Early Monday morning no sound of firing came from the front. Instead there was an ominous silence lasting several hours. A gendarme brought orders for Bartlett to leave immediately for Constantinople, saying that any hour the Turkish army might be in full flight, as they had suffered a disaster in the night. Instead of obeying the correspondent "squared" the guards and returned toward the battlefield. He could see through the mist only the red flashes of an artillery duel, which had been resumed, but on the lifting of the mist he could observe a change in the positions. At once it became evident that all the outlying works forming the advance defenses to the receding center line had fallen into the hands of the Bulgarians, who no longer were concentrating against the outlying lines, but had brought up guns and were now shelling the main lines of works in front of Hademkeul, as well as the left wing of the Turkish lines from the captured positions.

Bulgarian Attack Succeeds. From an official source he learned that at 1 o'clock in the morning the Bulgarians concentrated their infantry against the advanced lines and delivered a night attack with decisive effect, the whole work falling into their hands as the result of 45 minutes' fighting at the point of a bayonet. This was the disaster to which the gendarme referred. The Bulgarians were now established in an arc made by the receding circle of hills forming the main line of defense, which enabled them to attack at will the main line around Hademkeul itself. Still more serious was the fact that they could enfilade the Turkish left wing, and if they pierced the center at Hademkeul both wings would be cut off and would be compelled to retire in confusion if it were possible to escape at all. Having captured the outer works, the Bulgarians devoted the entire day to a tremendous bombardment of their remaining work. They also demoralized the reserves by concentrating a section of their fire on the exposed camps. Early morning mist made the fire on the camps ineffective, but later, when the day cleared, shooting was resumed with the old-time accuracy, and the effects became painfully apparent among the troops of the first army. A steady dribble of men began to leave the lines, making for shelter in the rear, and apparently no effort was made to stop them.

Turkish Artillery Quiet. Soon entirely battalions began to clear off in masses and the whole army corps showed signs of breaking up and retiring in confusion. Throughout the morning the Turkish artillery hardly replied to the enemy's fire, being either chary of disclosing their position or short of ammunition. It was evident that this bombardment of the first army's corps was intended only to demoralize the troops and to keep in check any counter-attack against the main Bulgarian advance on Hademkeul. During the morning and afternoon no infantry attack was delivered against the main position, which was subjected to the same concentrated bombardment as the outer works had suffered the previous day. As to the positions of the combatants when he left the field Monday, Mr. Bartlett says: "The Bulgarians occupy all the advanced works, where their artillery is established and are engaged in bombarding the center of the main lines of defense around Hademkeul, evidently with the intention of delivering an infantry attack late in the evening, in the night or perhaps at dawn. "Should this attack succeed, the famous lines are won. The Turkish army has no alternative but retirement to Constantinople. If the army again retreats, it will break up altogether. There merely will be a repetition of the scenes after the battle of Luleburgas, with the army arriving at Stamboul instead of Tchatalja."

Correspondent is Arrested. Bartlett was unable to stay until nightfall as he was placed under arrest and escorted to the rear, and ordered to proceed under guard to Constantinople. He planned, however, to break away in the morning and proceed across the country to witness the end of the battle. The correspondent in another dispatch fully confirms the terrible slaughter scenes, the horror of which he says can never be effaced from his mind. As there were no medical arrangements, the victims were thrown out to die. Then the bodies were hastily covered with a thin layer of earth. "These ghastly mounds," he says, "filler the whole country, there is no escaping them. But these horrid scenes pale in significance when compared with the horrors of Hademkeul, where the remnants of the defeated army finally rallied. These men, who lived for 10 days on green corn, or scraps of offal picked up on the march, yield the greatest number of victims. I never actually entered the village of Hademkeul, because the sights outside caused me to turn my horse in the opposite direction. The valley in which Hademkeul lies, is the valley of the shadow of death."

AUTO INSURANCE IS VOID

Court Will Not Permit Man to Insure Against Own Carelessness. DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 21.—The Iowa Supreme Court today handed down a decision holding that insurance written against damages from automobile accidents is void. The Supreme Court held that it was against public policy to allow a man to insure himself against the result of his own carelessness. Steamer Lord Curzon Safe. NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Anxiety for the safety of the British steamship Lord Curzon, which sailed from Seattle for the Orient October 5, was dispelled today when a cablegram was received here from Tokyo announcing her arrival at that port.

MAN SHOTS EX-WIFE

BYRON JENNISON FIRES BULLET AT SIXTH AND TAYLOR.

After Running Several Blocks, Divorced Husband Sends Futile Shot Toward His Own Heart.

Byron Jennison, 21 years old, shot and probably fatally wounded his divorced wife, Ida Jennison, about 12:30 o'clock Thursday morning at Sixth and Taylor streets while she was returning to her home, escorted by Victor Palmer, City Physician, reported about 2 o'clock that she could not be expected to live. The shooting is the result of a fit of jealous rage, according to Jennison, who has confessed that he shot at her. Mrs. Jennison obtained a divorce from Jennison, who is a railroad man, about a month ago on charges of cruelty. They had been married about four years, but separated last August. Jennison contested the divorce and said last night that when he learned his ex-wife was keeping company with other men he went insanely jealous. About 11 o'clock last night he went to 355 Taylor street, where Mrs. Jennison lives. Not seeing her there he went downtown, and at Sixth and Taylor met her and Palmer. Pulling the gun, he says, he commanded her to come with him. On her reply that she could not, he opened fire, shooting once and then fleeing. Jennison and Palmer are held at the police station. Aside from burns Jennison is not badly injured. Mr. Palmer is an employe of the city docks. Jennison gives his address at 1664 Van Houten street. Mrs. Jennison was given her maiden name, Ida Montgomery, when she won her divorce. She lives with her mother, Mrs. M. D. Willoughby.

OWNER 'DROWNS' HIS AUTO Alaskan Offers to Pay for Driving $1500 Car Deeper Into Bay. SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—Obeying the orders of his employer, H. H. Hart, of Oakland, James Litz, a chauffeur, ran a $4500 automobile off the rear of a ferryboat in San Francisco Bay today. When informed that the machine had been sunk in the bay, Hart, who made his money in Alaskan mines, wrote to the railroad company, offering to pay the expenses if the company would send a pdiver to hammer the automobile deeper into the bay. Hart's decision to "drown" the offending automobile was reached after it had rolled up a repair bill amounting to $2000. Yesterday he called Litz into his library. "Take that car out and lose it," he said. "I can't lose it," replied Litz. "It's too well known. Somebody would find it and bring it back again." "Then sink it in the middle of the bay," said Hart. The chauffeur performed his mission.
