DETAILED PLAY RECOUNTED

Crowd of 6000 Sees Men Ploy Through Oregon Winged M Line for Big Gains-Portland Yardage Due to Line Bucking.

A crowd of 6000 persons, keenly ap-preciative, but not so noisily enthuslastic as in other years, witnessed the 13th University of Oregon football defeat at the hands of Multnomah Amateur Athletic in the 19th struggle between the athletic teams of the two institutions on Multnomah Field yesterday afternoon.

The rooting, usually a feature of these annual gridiron clashes, was confined almost exclusively to the Multnomah Club contingent yesterday, but those who went to the field to enjoy a verbal combat between rival rooting squads were treated to athletic thrillers in numbers sufficient to atone for the absence of a vocal duel.

Oregon was represented by 75 youths, who marched upon the field behind the Washington High School band shortly before 2 o'clock. They gally entered the field and commenced a desultory bombardment of the Multnomah posi tion across the field until humbled into silence by the ferocious activity of the Winged "M" stalwarts in the first and Oregon Spirit Is Crushed.

But the 200 willing workers of the scarlet and white, under command of Lyle Brown, were in a different mood. The contingent, with scarlet and white ribbons about hats and on lapels, wielded scarlet and white megaphones to good effect during the hours of conflict. They did not produce the sustained and harmonious volume of sound noted in the efforts of the college rooting squad, but the enthusiasm and individual noises were there. They were sadly out of tune in the rendition of dividual noises were there. They were sadly out of tune in the rendition of the "We'll do the same thing over again," in which a repetition of the second quarter was threatened in the third quarter, and so on, but were effective in the "Multnomah" yells, of which there were three, and in the "Boola, Boola."

The crowd was still pouring upon the field when the game started, but few of the spectators missed the scoring of the first touchdown. A few seats were vacant in the grandstand and the north bleacher section was only partly
