SCHOOL TALK HEARD

Vocational Education Urged by College Professors.

CAR SERVICE IS DISCUSSED

Wonderful Resources of State Used as Argument Favoring New Departure in Academic Training of Portland's Youth.

Establishment of high schools with vocational departments of agriculture nd horticulture was urged yesterday at the luncheon of the East Side Business Men's Club at the Hotel Cliford, East Sixth and East Morrison streets, and a resolution was adopted indorsing the movement to erect such a high school in the South East Side. Professor C. L. Lewis and Professor E. D. Ressler, of the Oregon Agricultural College, and M. G. Munly, of the Portland Board of Education, were the speakers.

Professor Lewis, of the horticultural Professor Lewis, of the college, outlined department of the college, outlined some of the work in that school along some of the work in the transition of the work in the line, and showed its value. He declared that there is marked interest in the horticultural and agricultural instructions given at the state institu-

"Oregon is a state with wonderful resources," said Professor Lewis, "wonderful in the production of apples, pears, Italian prunes, walnuts and loganberries, and there is no section of the United States which has so tion of the United States which he great a future along these lines, dairy industry is also great. The are opportunities for canneries factories. Portland's manual training and the state of the state factories. Portland's manual training schools have been doing good work, but Portland should afford the facilities for instruction for its young but Portland should allord the tenders for instruction for its young men along the vocational lines as other cities are doing. The interest in these lines is doing. The interest in these lines is remarkable. Middle-aged men come to my office and ask me what they can do. Such a high school with an agricultural department as proposed would afford opportunity to young men to get their secondary instruction along these lines and show them what they can do."

Professor Ressier said that 2800 people took advantage of the shorter agricultural courses in the Oregon Agricultural College, which he said is but a small fraction of the entire state.
"Our work at the college should not be limited to those who can come to the college," said Professor Ressier, "and to the people who cannot come to us we must carry our facilities.
"What our young people need is vocational training in the secondary schools, which will open their eyes to opportunity outside of law and medicine and the professions, which are overgrowded. 2800 Take Short Course.

There is no greater tragedy than for a finely educated young man with no chance to place himself, no outlet for his abilities and acquirements. I have visited the Portland manual training schools and can see they are doing a great work. It would be a great opportunity to make the proposed high school a vocational school with agricultural and horticultural departments. It would be a great thing for Port-It would be a great thing for Portland and the entire state. The old methods in our schools are not sufficent, as practical and technical knowledge is required powerful. dge is required nowadays."

School Directors Interested. M. G. Munly, of the Board of Education, said in his talk that he was present to get information. He said that he spoke for himself and not for the other directors, but that all the members of the Board are interested in the movement to make the new high school a vocational school. He declared that many academic instruction is no school a vocational school. He declared that mere academic instruction is no longer sufficient, and that while the Board of Education had no plans for a vocational high school it was seek-ng information.

Following the discussion the follow ing resulution was adopted: ing resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the East Side Business Men's Club, believing that the introduction of agricultural and horticultural instructions in our high schools will be highly beneficial and practical, incorses the movement originated by leading educators, and given its sanction and support to the efforts started to erect such high school in the South East Side. This indersement is given for the reason that the East Side Business Men's Club stands for progress in all departments of our social and educational structure, believing that education should be vocational, practical and helpful as well as ornamental.

John C. Lewis, of Portland, and H. K. Miller Close Big Deal.

GRANTS PASS, Or., Dec. 23.—(Special.)—John C. Lewis, of Portland, owner of the Columbia placer mines, and H. K. Miller, owner of the Brimstone mines, have merged their properties in placer holdings, which amounts to about 700 acres. The new combination includes well-settled water rights on Grayes creek, that is carried through 25 miles of ditches before the fluid begins to segregate the mineralized ground. By the first of the year 10 giants will be working day and night upon the properties. Several carloads of new pipe have been ordered, and will be ready for installation by the first of the year.

To save the waste in sluice boxes patented grizzlies will be put in. The owners intend to incorporate under the

The Catholic institutions are co-operating in preparing for a pleasant Christmas for their wards, not only in Portland but in the various homes in neighboring places. Christmas trees, gifts and dinners are prepared for all. The Poor Farm will have a big Christmas turkey dinner. The 'congregation of Trinity Episcopal Church, through James Laidlaw, British Consul, has arranged for the delivery of 200 pounds of turkey at the farm and Superintendent D. D. Jackson has been instructed by the County Court to provide everything else that goes to make up an orthodox Christmas dinner.

The Christmas parties will not all be over in a day. At the People's Institute a party has been arranged for friends from the Associated Charities. A Christmas tree has been provided and a programme, which will include many "stunts," by the children is being prepared.
