

MAUS' DEPARTURE FIRST REAL MOVE

Brigadier-General's Rush East Viewed as United States' Intervention Step.

BAND SERENADES OFFICER

Commander of Department of Columbia, Which Ceased to Exist at Midnight, Goes to Lead Troops That Will Entertain First.

VANCOUVER BARRACKS, Wash., Feb. 14.—(Special.)—With the departure tonight of Brigadier-General Marion P. Maus for his new post to command the First Brigade of the United States Army, stationed at Albany, N. Y., the United States Government means presumably the first actual step toward sending of troops to quell the Mexican disturbances should they grow worse.

The First Division will be the first to move should the Mexican revolution demand intervention. The fact that the Secretary of War has, by telegraph, ordered General Maus to rush to his new command is taken here as an indication that the Government means actually to move toward Mexico any necessary troops to handle the situation.

The parting of General Maus tonight was historical as well as impressive. He left as department commander of the Department of the Columbia, an Army divisional organization which after 46 years passes out of existence at midnight as a result of the recent reorganization effected in the Army.

But there was a personal importance attached to the going of the highly esteemed commander from the barracks. The Twenty-first Infantry band assembled in front of General Maus' headquarters at 7 o'clock and played "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Speed Our Friend," according to old Army customs. Later every officer of the post gathered in front of the commander's quarters and joined in the informal reception just before his train left at 7:40 o'clock.

General Maus, having accepted or declined to accept his new charge Tuesday night. He announced before going that, nothing happening, he would be ready to assume duty Wednesday morning. It is confidently believed at the post here that General Maus will be among the first to head troops for the border if intervention is actually decided upon.

Maus to Retire in Two Years. General Maus has been in the service of the United States Army 44 years and will retire, on account of age, in less than two years. He has been commanding the Department of the Columbia since July 6, 1909.

The Department of the Columbia was established by the President June 27, 1865, and Brigadier-General C. Wright was the first to command it here. For a few years the department headquarters were in Portland, but were removed back here in 1878. An officers' mess of officers passing through the headquarters was begun in 1870 and this was yet in service today.

Major Adrien S. Fleming, Adjutant-General under General Maus, has been ordered to remain here to act as brigade adjutant. This post will be headquarters for the Seventh Brigade of the Third Division, beginning tomorrow. The troops under command here will comprise the First Infantry, under Colonel George S. Young, now post commander of West Point barracks; the Fourteenth Infantry, under Colonel George Wright and Fort Lawton, and the Twentieth Infantry, now at Fort Douglas, Salt Lake City, under Colonel Irons.

OFFENSE TO TAFT FEARED

Inaugural Committee Protests Against Dilapidated Elephant.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 14.—Declaring that such a feature might be offensive to President Taft, Robert N. Harper, of the inaugural committee at Washington, has written a letter to Clark C. Doughty, who is in charge of the Ohio delegation which will attend the inauguration of President-elect Wilson, protesting against the use in the inaugural parade of an elephant "blind in one eye and somewhat dilapidated."

The Ohio delegation had planned to have a donkey, representing the Democratic party, lead the elephant, representing the Republican party, at the head of the Ohio delegation.

The plan was to have a large patch over the elephant's blind eye and patches on his side. The committee, however, does not object to the donkey.

MARRIED CADET MUST GO

Taft Approves Dismissal of West Pointer Who Eloped.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—President Taft has approved the action of the West Point authorities, who recommended the dismissal of Cadet Elmer E. Adler from the Military Academy for getting married.

Cadet Adler was a second-class man and eloped last month with one of the students in a fashionable girl's school on the Hudson. The elopement caused much speculation at the time as it was said the authorities at West Point had not had to deal with a similar case. The benedict was appointed from Montana and entered the academy in March, 1910.

GLEAM OF PEACE SEEN

RAILROADS MAKE NEW PROPOSALS TO FIREMEN.

Presidents of Affected Lines Meet and Put Situation With Managers Who Act Anew.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A new possibility of peace between the 54 Eastern railroads and their 4000 firemen who have been trying to strike for higher wages and revised working conditions appeared tonight with a fresh arbitration proposal by the railroads.

The railroads, which have insisted upon arbitration by a board of seven men similar to that which decided the dispute with the engineers last year, while the firemen demanded arbitration under the Erdman act, now propose arbitration by a board of six members, two representatives of the roads, two of the firemen and two disinterested members, to be appointed as the Erdman act provides. The roads offer also to retain in the arbitration proceedings all other features of the Erdman act which the firemen may desire.

The railroads' proposition was submitted immediately to the Federal officials who have been trying to bring the parties together and at once placed by the mediators before the representatives of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. When a break seemed almost inevitable and the firemen said they would wait no longer than midnight for the roads to make some concessions, President Brown, of the New York Central, sent out a hurried call to such presidents of the great affected roads as could be reached. When the presidents adjourned tonight they said they would not take the matter out of the managers' hands, but would be satisfied with whatever disposition they should make of the question.

border of this glacial sheet was stuporous, extending much farther south in some places than in others. As soon as the climax of the glacial period was reached, and the snowfall began to melt faster than it accumulated, and the sheet receded a large aggregation of population which had centered in what is now Missouri and the adjacent country, gradually moved northward or east as the ground was bare, ultimately reoccupying a large portion of the continental area which had been populous in the interglacial period, up to the southern boundary of the Great Lakes, where a gigantic ice dam, 600 miles long, retained the vast body of water which then comprised the five Great Lakes, Superior, Huron, Michigan, Erie and Ontario.

Cata Not Born in Garden.

This dam was not considered a menace in its day any more than a similar barrier which dammed a big glacial lake in the Connecticut Valley at one time, or the existing ice front which girls the north shore of Hudson Strait in the Arctic Zone. Yet an inevitable convulsion came eventually, caused by recession of the globe which was the earth, which broke it up as effectually as the Alaskan earthquake of 1902 wrecked the stupendous wall of the Muir Glacier and caused water, help us to determine.

The benedict was appointed from Montana and entered the academy in March, 1910.

portion of South America which has been discovered by the creation of Adam (not from the creation of the earth, whose preparation for the occupation of man required incomputable ages to accomplish). The ancients did not reckon their chronology after the modern fashion. Even before lunar time was in vogue they counted the years of Adam's life of 930 years as the duration of his reign, when at the termination of his dynasty the house of Seth (descended from Seth the Appointed, Genesis, 4:25), governed for 913 years. Adding these years (1843), and Noah's together up to the time he built the ark, the sum total will give the date of the beginning of this history.

creatures formerly actuated by the divinely unaltered principle of love to God and man into beings filled with hate and thirsting with revenge on their oppressors. The image of God, their inheritance by creation, was obliterated by the presence and prevalence of evil. Even the imaginations of their hearts were only evil, and that continually. Famine induced pestilence and the fair land of Tula was filled with violence.

according to the Scriptures, rendered useless the aqueducts and irrigating canals. Some disjointed records of this overwhelming catastrophe are inscribed upon temple walls, monoliths, pyramids and porticoes, which attest their extinguished greatness. The discoveries show that the whole place formed a great empire and that many routes extended out from the city. It is probable that the gold was brought up from the South, or California, while the onyxes were probably from the agates which are found there in great quantities even today.
