The Puget Sound Tow Boat Company boat and the Port of Portland tow service have been requested to make immediate suggestions to take the vessel off and it is expected that some ctive measures will be inaugurated today.

Captain Westfall made the following statement:

"On the afternoon previous to the vessel going ashore both the mate and I were sure of our position as 40 miles off the mouth of the Columbia and stood in southeast until we found bot-tom in 65 fathoms. At the same time we saw lights that we took for a steamer coming out of the Columbia River but it was only after we struck that it was discovered the lights were small fires on the beach. At no time were we in distress as much as the lifesaving crew that came out to our with sand ballast, is resting easily with one anchor and 150 fathoms of chain, 400 yards from deep water. Un-less a sudden storm should arise the vessel should be taken off easily at the high tide of next Thursday.

A homestead of forest land is in his theory "non-resident exploitation." He says the homestead entry should only be of land suitable for homes, in which we all agree. Then he decides that land covered with valuable timber is not suitable for homes. He seems to admit of no exceptions. And this in the face of the universal history of ploneer homes in the West. Many of pioneer homes in the West. Many of us remember in our state the stretches of once dense forest for many miles in extent along the Willamette, the Tillamook, the Sluslaw, the Nehalem and along other Coast rivers and their

The Secretary gives assurance that in the discretion confided to him there will be no abuse of the rule requiring residence and definite area in cultivation. Unfortunately, this is only the promising to the ear and the break to be a land which is not really timber land but is agricultural land coverations of the numbers from various local and untiring effort toward complaint with most convincing evidence of good faith and untiring effort toward complaint which homesteaders settled, with long years of toil, but they have been turned down and their proofs rejected.
