WOOER IS FEARED

Elderly Widow Deluded by Man Much Younger.

TRAGIC EXPERIENCE TOLD After Promise of Marriage Effort Is Made to Secure Transfer of Property and Life Threatened Before Departure.

An elderly widow, deluded by a man of little more than half her years, robbed of her money, and in fear of her life, has told her story to Detective Hawley and set in motion an investigation which may lead to prosecutions. On her knees for more than an hour, with a sharp razor blade at her neck, while she resisted attempts to force her to sign away her property, is one of many harrowing experiences she related to the officer.

Cornelia H. Colson, widow of "Big Sam" Colson, formerly a well-known river captain, is the complainant, and E. M. Jewett, aged 30, a paperhanger, is the accused. As yet he has not been arrested.

Wedding Date Set. Mrs. Colson says that she became acquainted with Jewett some months ago, when he stayed for a time at her house. She is the possessor of a ranch and other property, and Jewett was aware of the fact. He paid court to her, she says, and it was agreed that they were to be married about the middle of March.

This point established, says Mrs. Colson, Jewett began to make proposals that she should turn over the property to him and make a will in his favor. She accused him of mercenary motives and they quarreled. Finally, she says, Jewett offered to leave, but with the provision that he would kill her before he went. She supplied him with money to go to California, and he accepted it, she charges, taking also a watch that had been her husband's property.

VESSEL'S FATE UNCERTAIN

Senator Chamberlain Writes "Oregon" Not Definitely Doomed.

"I am informed by the Navy Department that there is no disposition to dismantle the battleship Oregon," says a letter received from Senator Chamberlain by Secretary E. C. Giltner, of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, yesterday. Mr. Chamberlain also said that he would secure and send to Mr. Giltner as soon as possible statistics as to the cost of maintenance of such a ship in case the Oregon could be stationed in Portland, which statistics Mr. Giltner asked in his letter requesting that the Senator use his influence to block any movement to "scrap" the Oregon.

If the statistics to be received from Mr. Chamberlain show that the cost of maintenance of the Oregon in the harbor will not be too much greater than the present expense to the state of maintaining the cruiser Boston as a naval militia training ship, Mr. Giltner says that a possible movement will be begun at once to have the battleship Oregon substituted for the Boston and placed in the harbor.

WOMAN ASKS REHEARING

With Sentence Nearly Completed Review Is Requested.

With only a short time to serve on a one-year sentence, and at present under parole, Lucille LaBarge, convicted of being the teacher and guide of young girl shoplifters, made application in Municipal Court yesterday for a reopening of her case, on the plea that she had confessed her guilt in ignorance of her rights. As the sentence was imposed last May, the court denied the application. The girl, who is one of a family of criminals, asserts that she is innocent of the charge and that she pleaded guilty on the advice of Mrs. Lola G. Baldwin. After serving part of her sentence she was paroled by the Governor into the custody of Mrs. Baldwin, but she remains a problem on account of the lack of an institution to which to commit girls of such tendencies.

BOSTON BANKER ON VISIT

Eastern Houses Said to Recognize West as Good Investment Field.

D. E. Wing, president of the First National Bank of Boston, accompanied by Mrs. Wing, visited Portland yesterday to acquaint himself with possible opportunities for future investments. He conferred with local bankers in the morning and left later for the East.

"All Eastern banks," he said, "are interested in the Northwest now. We recognize this as a good field for investment. It is our business to keep in touch with the situation here." Mr. Wing declared that some kind of currency reform is necessary to prevent such financial stringencies as that from which the country suffered in the Fall of 1907. The bill proposed by Senator Aldrich, he thinks, embodied some good features.

"That difficulty in getting a measure like the Aldrich bill enacted into law," he said, "is the popular opposition. People feel that if it is a good thing for the bankers it is a poor thing for the rest of the population." "A measure designed to remedy our currency system should be drawn up by someone who knows the banking business and someone in whom the people will have confidence. I think it is possible to find a man with these combined qualifications."

DISEASE DATA SOUGHT

WELLESLEY COLLEGE WOMAN WANTS OREGON STATISTICS. Dr. Calvin S. White, State Health Officer, Asked to Compile Facts on 12 Different Ailments.

Dr. Calvin S. White, state health officer, has received what he believes to be the crowning achievement in his quest for statistics on 12 diseases, some of them common and others uncommon, and the last question asks what is the death rate of each in the state.

Dr. White visited the Pacific Power Company's camp of 300 men near Hood River Saturday to investigate the sanitary conditions and offer suggestions. The company requested him to make the trip and as this is unusual he is glad to vouch for the care they have taken of their men.

Today he goes to Independence to investigate an epidemic of smallpox. There are 11 of 15 cases reported but they are confined to a few families.

In accordance with the interstate quarantine regulations, Dr. White has received a communication from the Treasury office at Washington which is asking to give the statistics of 12 diseases, some of them common and others uncommon, and the last question asks what is the death rate of each in the state.

Jury Commissionership Vacant. The resignation of Sheriff Tom Word as United States jury commissioner became automatic by his accepting a state office under the Federal statutes. The position pays but $15 a quarter. The Federal statutes provide that the United States jury commissioner shall
