SELLWOOD BOARD MEETS.—At the meeting of the Sellwod Board of Trade Tuesday night at the Sellwood Y. M. C. A. the matter of securing a freight house on the O. W. P. line and dockage for that district was considered. E. C. Golden, A. J. Henniman and J. W. Campbell were appointed to take up the two propositions. A freight house is wanted to enable business men to get supplies by the local railway. The dockage facilities were considered the more important and the opinion was expressed that Sellwood should be provided with a dock on the property of the city at the foot of Umatilia avenue where steamers might hand wood and other articles. It was considered important on account of the prospective opening of the locks at Oregon City for traffic. The club may ask that Sellwood be provided with a dock by the Dock Commission.

Some Chapters of a Possible Autobiography

By Theodore Roosevelt

The Oregonian has great satisfaction in announcing for publication every week beginning next Sunday, a series of papers by Theodore Roosevelt, under the title "Some Chapters of a Possible Autobiography," which are certain to be of intense human interest. They will be not only of National but of international importance in their interpretation of a personality which during many years has probably attracted more widespread attention in newspapers, periodicals, and among the people than any other single personality of the present day.

(These chapters will be published by special arrangement with The Outlook, of which Theodore Roosevelt is the Contributing Editor.)

The world knows Mr. Roosevelt chiefly as a statesman and public servant, as an orator and soldier and writer.

Only a few know him as a private citizen, and many of the personal experiences that have helped to mold his remarkable career are known only to his close friends and co-workers.

In these papers Mr. Roosevelt will talk with greater intimacy than he has on the platform, in his books, or in his editorial writing, and the American people, as well as the greater public, will learn about his experiences, his philosophy of life, and so much of his achievement as will illustrate why he has come to hold the views he now holds, and what he believes can be taught thereby to others.

They will meet him at close range.

Mr. Roosevelt, coming to the Presidency after his stirring experiences in the Spanish War, took the initiative in many of the most important events of our time—both National and international. These articles give him for the first time a unique opportunity to tell the history of these events as he saw them. The prosecution of criminal trusts, the settling of the Russo-Japanese War, the inception of the Panama Canal, the voyage of the American fleet around the world -- these are examples of the kind of public events from which Mr. Roosevelt may choose subjects for narrative and comment.

There are many things which Mr. Roosevelt has learned not from books or from what others have told him, but at first hand - from life itself.

He was, for instance, a delicate and rather timid boy. He has learned to acquire health and courage by practice. He was a ranchman in the West, and one reason why he knows his fellow-Americans is to be found in the companionship he had with the sturdy cowpunchers of the old frontier. He has some strong convictions about social conditions. These he developed as a consequence of his experiences as legislator and as Police Commissioner, when he saw what those social conditions meant to living men and women whom he personally knew.

So through his life — as a boy on Long Island, as an undergraduate at Harvard, as a ranchman in Montana, as a member of the New York Assembly, as Civil Service Commissioner, as Police Commissioner of New York City, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, as Governor of the State of New York, as Vice-President of the United States, as President, as an army officer, hunter, naturalist, student of history, editor - he has always been a learner as well as a leader.

In these papers, beginning Sunday, Mr. Roosevelt will tell some of the things he has learned and how he has learned them, telling them primarily with a view to the help that may thereby be given. This autobiography will afford keen satisfaction and high inspiration to the young people of the country, who are all especially interested in personal narrative of active achievement.

These papers will be fully illustrated with portraits, facsimiles of various documents, pictures of buildings and localities, and other appropriate matter.
