have been inquiring for wheat for some time past, have raised their limits to a figure that would indicate a considerable cut in freights is impending. The present rate on wheat and flour to Japan is $4.00 and if this is lowered to the extent that some of the dealers predict it will give an opening for a fairly heavy trade in wheat and flour during the remaining months of the season.

Shippers for several weeks have been bringing a good deal of pressure to bear on the Oriental lines to induce them to put the rate down so trade with the other side could be resumed. Steamer epace is more abundant at this time of year, and for that reason the companies were more inclined to listen to the arguments of the exporters. A further factor in the situation is the coming of the new lines. This new competition is likely to keep freights down once they are lowered.

A decline in the freight tariff across the Pacific is not likely to have any immediate Pacific is not likely to have any immediate effect on wheat or flour prices here. It will stimulate business, but will hardly result in higher quotations.
