BERG IS IN TROUBLE

Wrestler Tries to Put One "Over" at Pasco.

BAD RECORD REMEMBERED

Saloonkeeper Taken Into Frame-Up and After Betting Money Given Him for Purpose Wagers $230 of His Own and "Squeals."

If John Berg had any friends left when he was driven from Portland one year ago by the police, the Swedish wreatler has lost them all by virtue of the sensational expose of his flimflam operations at Pasco last week. After spending a night in jail for buncoing Ed Horsch, a Pasco saloonman, out of $230 on the old Mabray fake match, Berg confessed to his crookedness, and

Berg Quits "Cold."

At the time Berg quit cold in his Portland match with Fred Beell, because Beell refused to let him win, as agreed upon per Berg's demand a few minutes before entering the ring, it was whispered that Berg was a wrestier with a dirty past.

Warrants are said to be out for him in Texas, where he worked extensively for several Winters, and even sleepy old Salt Lake City, where any old kind of a frameup wrestling match gets by the press and public, has handed him the glassy stare Berg's confidence game at Pasco was of such ancient vintage that it is a wonder anybody fell for it. Berg drifted into the railroad town in company ed into the railroad town in company with a companion, who posed as A. J. Sloan, a wealthy Englishman. Warner arrived a day or two later, and, after making the acquaintance of John Bergeson, a Pasco wrestler, suggested that a match be arranged and that Bergeson lay down to Berg.

Horsch "Ponies Up."

Bergeson refused and then Warner sprung his coup. He confided in Bergeson and his backer, Horsch, that the "wealthy" Englishman would bet unlimited money on Berg. The game then proposed was for Berg to lay down to Bergeson and thus trim the Briton. Warner thereupon gave Horsch $1960 of his own money to bet on Bergeson. The match took place in an alfalfa field near Kennewick. Berg won the first fall as prearranged, and then the Englishman offered to bet $5000 more on Berg. Horsch fell for the frameup, and, after betting all of Warner's money, wagered $230 of his own, all he had. Of course, Berg double-crossed Horsch and won the fall—but not by prearrangement.
