

BODY OF MR. GAULD TAKEN FROM RIVER

Indications Point to Misstep While Walking on Bluff Above Willamette.

WATCH STOPS AT 3:25

George Brown, Living Near Rocky Home, Notified Officers of Man Having Crossed His Grounds and City Grappler Is Sent.

In the water at the foot of a steep, shelving bank on the Willamette River, near the country home of Dr. E. E. Rocky, was found, yesterday morning, the body of Charles Gauld, president of the Gauld Company, who, while mentally unbalanced, wandered away from the Rocky home Friday.

Mr. Gauld, who had broken down from overwork some weeks ago, went to the Rocky residence Friday morning for an outing, but left when he was unobserved. His absence being discovered about 4 o'clock Friday afternoon by Mrs. Gauld, who was with him, arranging the tent in which he was to live.

Search Starts Soon. Search was instituted immediately, at first quietly, but when it became apparent Saturday that he was not alive in the immediate vicinity, the authorities were appealed to.

While the hunt was being carried on in every direction, George Brown, living close to the scene of the disappearance, reported to the police that someone had walked across his garden, leaving his hat at the edge of the bank. The authorities at that time did not know of Mr. Gauld's disappearance.

Misstep Is Theory. Because no water had entered the lungs, the city grappler, who is an expert in such matters, holds that Mr. Gauld was unconscious when he struck the water, probably from a blow on the head, and he supports this belief by the fact that the hat was left at the top of the bank.

Death occurred at 3:25, according to the watch found on the body and which was stopped at that time. The watch crystal was broken. The mouth and eyes of the drowned man were closed.

Charles Gauld was born in Old Mel drum, Aberdeenshire, 49 years ago, and in his younger days was associated with his uncle, James Gordon, in the millwright industry. He came to America about 20 years ago and had charge of a sawmill at Snoqualmie, Wash., before coming to Portland.

NEW BIDS TO BE INVITED

Lambert Avenue District Sewer System to Be Contracted. Bids for the construction of the Lambert avenue district sewer system on the East Side are to be advertised for by the City Auditor at once, following the settlement of a legal controversy over the awarding of a contract under bids received last summer.

Under the original bids William Lind was low, but a clerical error in his bid caused the contract to be given to the James Kennedy Construction Company for $85,000. Mr. Lind brought suit to prevent the signing of the contract. This held the contract up for several months and finally resulted in the executive board rejecting all bids and ordering a new advertisement.

Thirty-five hundred Portland school children, from 28 schools, are entered in the Portland school children's garden contest. They have their gardens planted or are planting them, and from now until the crop is gathered and the prizes awarded rivalry will be intense.

Each child has a little plot of ground, in which, so far as possible, every boy and girl has been allowed to plant the things that he or she wishes to grow. The following is a list of the schools, the amount of land devoted to the contest, in which the 3500 children are engaged:

RECORD OF HUDSON LADEN WITH CRIME

Trail Followed by Detectives Leads Back to Bank Forgery Perpetrated Here.

PRISON SENTENCES SERVED

Letters From Every Part of Country Seek to Implicate Prisoner in Various Swindling Designs Upon Women.

By following out a trail which started from Portland, reaching Tacoma, Walla Walla, San Rafael, Cal., and San Quentin Penitentiary, H. M. Hudson, mysterious prisoner at the County Jail, has been traced back to where a search started from Portland. As a result an information charging him with forgery will be filed today.

H. W. Hudson.

He will be accused of swindling the United States National Bank out of $256 in 1910, while working as a dairy hand on Sauvie Island.

This came about through the publication of a photograph of a snapshot of Hudson. The newspaper picture was seen by a guard at Walla Walla, who identified Hudson as Clarence Crandall, a prisoner at the Washington Penitentiary, and earlier at San Quentin. Seeing the account of this identification, Superintendent Holmes, of the Pinkerton agency, remembered the name of one of the aliases of Charles H. Wallace, whom his agency had been seeking for three years, and a little examination disclosed an unquestionable identity.

Fellow-Worker Victim.

Wallace was employed by J. McIntyre, a dairyman on Sauvie Island, early in 1910. He gained the confidence of Joseph P. Kramer, a fellow-worker, learned he had an account with the bank, obtained specimens of his signature, and appeared one day at the bank with a check for $240.

While employed on a ranch near San Rafael, Cal., it is alleged that he made several efforts to pass bad checks. Miss Jennie Morken, 1114 Albee street, Oakland, knew Crandall as Charles Cahill Collier, a purported graduate of the Ohio State University. She caught him trifling with her handbag one day and later missed $20.

Sibyl Anderson, a waitress of Seattle, married Crandall in January, 1909. He represented himself as a physician and a member of the Elks, and said his father was an officer in the Navy. He deserted her two months after the marriage, went to California and was extradited from there for forging a check for $135, passed upon the Hotel Donnelly at Tacoma. He was sent up for from one to 14 years.

Crandall is identified as Charles H. Wallace, who passed forged checks to the amount of $526 to the United States National Bank of Portland in 1910.

Field of Operations Wide.

As Hudson, he is identified by Mrs. I. Kle, of Newberg, Or., as the man who scraped acquaintance with her on a train entering New York, followed her to her home and stole her jewelry, valued at $10,000.

Miss M. G. Alexander, of Portland, identifies Hudson as the man, who passed forged checks for $2000, and extracted $60 from her handbag.

Miss Emma Larson, of Kalamazoo, Mich., identifies articles found in Hudson's possession as being stolen from her in a restaurant at Los Angeles.

In addition to these, Detectives Vaughn and Hyde have received letters from every part of the country, seeking to connect the prisoner with various swindling jobs upon women.

REV. R. N. McLEAN RESIGNS

Failure to Reconstruct Anabel Presbyterian Church One Reason.

Rev. Robert N. McLean, who has been pastor of the Anabel Presbyterian Church, Mount Scott, for the last three years, tendered his resignation yesterday morning, to take effect June 20. The resignation will be submitted to the Portland Presbytery June 17, and arrangements will be made at that meeting to dissolve the pastoral relationship.

The resignation came as a surprise to most of the members of the congregation. Some time ago a movement was made to raise funds to reconstruct and enlarge the church, and while most of the reasons given for the resignation of the Anabel Church had 58 members when he took charge, and is now has 156 active members, and is considered a prosperous church. Mr. McLean is the permanent clerk of the Portland Presbytery, and he stands well in the Presbytery.

Rev. J. A. P. McGaw, stated clerk of the Presbytery, stated that Mr. McLean is highly regarded by his ministerial brethren. He is a son of Rev. Robert McLean, recently of Grants Pass, and was one of the four for missionary work in Porto Rico, where he spent several years with his father and where he learned the Spanish language.

WOMAN AND VICTIM LOW

Mrs. Strang and One Child Sinking and One Recovering.

Though a charge of murder awaits the convalescence of Mrs. Lillian Strang, a patient at the Good Samaritan Hospital, and the mother of the child who became a double one, likelihood of the woman surviving to face the information is growing less. It was reported last night that her condition continues critical, and her son, Edwin, whom she poisoned and shot, also is sinking. Her daughter Marcia died early in the week.

Two weeks ago, at her home in the Peninsula district, Mrs. Strang, in a moment of frenzy, administered poison to her two eldest children and herself, shot the eldest and youngest and herself and undoing her work. The boy Edwin sustained a scalp wound which was not serious, but he is in a critical condition from the effects of the poison. The second child, Marcia, was poisoned but not shot, and died a week later. The baby, Oakley, though a bullet penetrated his brain, is recovering rapidly and is the only one of the four for whom hope is held out. Mrs. Strang partook of the poison and discharged a bullet into her brain.

The murder charge was filed by Detective Swensen as a formality, in case the woman recovers. Criminal responsibility is not laid to her for her act.

Take a Chalmers Ride

There's a difference between a Chalmers ride and merely an automobile ride.

Just as there's a difference between train rides. You know that the "Limited" is more comfortable, smoother riding than the "accommodation."

Just as there's a difference between horses. You know that a thoroughbred - mettlesome, trained, perfectly-gaited - is more pleasurable to ride than a poorly bred "tough mouth."

So is the self-eranking, light-footed, powerful, luxurious Chalmers more pleasurable than other cars.

The powerful long-stroke motor pulls smoothly on any road, steadily up any hill. A walking pace when you want to loaf; express train speed when you require it.

The four-forward speed transmission gives the flexibility which makes handling easy. You creep through heavy traffic or
