An ordinance granting to the Board of Health authority to enter into a contract for the disposal of dead animula was laid over for two weeks. At present the city removes such carcasses to the incinerator, where they are con-sumed, charging the person from whose premises they are taken $3 a head for premises they are taken $3 a head for removal. A company has offered to take the carcasses, making the same charge, and converting them into com-mercial products. It was argued that the step would be to the city's advan-tage, with the vegetable and fruit sea-son coming on meaning more work for the already overtaxed incinerator. already overtaxed Incinerator. Councilman Maguire objected to the passage of the ordinance, declaring that he believed a contract could be secured for the removal of the car-casses without cost to the city or the person from whose premises they are

Inside Rooms Authorized.

Over the objection of Building Inspector Plummer, and on recommendation of the health and police committee, an ordinance was passed permit-ting the construction of inside rooms in office buildings without direct out-door ventilation connections. Two thousand dollars was appropriated for the purpose of opening up the inlet of Columbia Slough, so that Columbia River water will flow through it, and, it is hoped, create a current sufficient to carry away

Councilman Baker, in replying to Mrs. Clark, said that he hoped he was gentleman enough to not contradict her gentleman enough to not contradict her statements, but that in justice to himself he wished to give his side of the story. He expressed regret that the incident had occurred, and cited the fact that at the time it had happened he had apologized to Mrs. Clark, and that she had accepted his apology in the presence of 50 women. The account of the affair printed in The Oregonian had been written by the reporter, he

"I think in view of all the facts," he said, "that Mrs. Clark has treated me unjustly. I never intentionally offended her, and yet she persists in hounding me."

Turning to Mrs. Clark, Mr. Baker said that he would suggest that she begin the matter of reform by getting her own husband to give up smoking, or by protesting against the practice in a grill which she patronized.

"I thank you, Mrs. Clark, for giving me this opportunity of vindicating myself," he said, in closing.

The vote of confidence followed, and the Council resumed its regular business.

W. Stone, general secretary of the Portland Y. M. C. A., who returned yesterday from the East. Most of Mr. Stone's time was passed in Cincinnati, where he attended the convention which has just concluded.

"Although these gatherings are held only once in three years," said Mr. Stone, "an exception has been made this time to permit delegates to visit the Coast in 1915. I talked with a great many men who will come, and all of them promised to visit Portland. As they are leaders in affairs in their respective cities and many of them hold positions of National prominence, their visit here will not be without benefit to this city."

Speaking for Ourselves and Hundreds of Others:

We, the undersigned supporters of G. Evert Baker for Commissioner of the City of Portland, hereby insist on the continuation of his candidacy to the arbitrament of the last ballot of the voter on June 2, 7 P. M., in the year of our Lord 1913, and for the following reasons: First, He is well qualified. He has both common school and college education; he is a man of unimpeachable honesty; he has had nearly twelve years' experience largely in commercial law practice; he has been for years an active member of civic organizations of our city; he has had numerous law eases that have brought him repeatedly into close relation with the various departments of our city government; he is pains-taking with his work and a tireless worker; he is fair-minded, a man of good habits and good sense; and, above all, he is a man of unsullied integrity today as when Banker Gilbert, of Rhodes, Iowa, wrote:
"I have known G. Evert Baker for fifteen years."

I can cheerfully recommend him as an honest, upright young man of splendid good habits and principles'; and as worthy of confidence today as when his college president wrote of him among 3500 fellow-students: "There is no one of whom I can, with more confidence, recommend to public favor. His work will more than verify every statement made."

Men are daily elevated to position of honor, responsibility and trust with no better qualifications than those of E. Evert Baker, nor vouched for from higher sources, and do not disappoint their constituents. All who are intimately acquainted with G. Evert Baker know he means what he said when he said: "I pledge you, if elected, whether friend or foe," the very best service there is in me. I stand for a clean life, a clean city and a City Beautiful. My motto is: For the enormous annual expense of our city her citizens ought, of right, receive a hundred cents on the dollar in service and civic betterment.

It is, therefore, not too much to declare it our conviction that, of the 269 American cities now operating satisfactorily under the commission form of government, few, if any, have commissioners who brought to their new and untried duties and responsibilties qualifications superior to those of G.

Secondly. Mr. G. Evert Baker was, after a careful examination into his qualifications and past record, reported back by the sub-committee of One Hundred as one of the 20 candidates favorably recommended by it as entitled to your support for the office of Commissioner of the City of Portland.

And it was moved and seconded by two of Portland's very prominent men in the committee of the whole that the sub-committee's recommendation be adopted, the president himself adding, at the time the motion was made, that he considered any one of these candidates just as eligible as another.

Council Tenders Unanimous Vote of Confidence.

Having granted the privilege of the floor to Mrs. A. E. Clark, the members of the City Council, at the regular session yesterday morning, listened to a bitter denunciation of Councilman Baker, and then, having heard his reply to her remarks, immediately tendered him a unanimous vote of confidence.

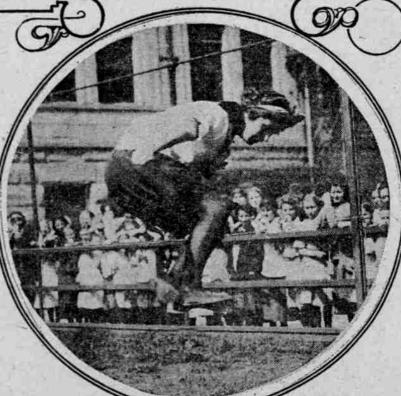

Mrs. Clark's remarks concerned the controversy which started some two months ago between herself and Councilman Baker over the fact that members of the Council were found smoking in committee meeting.

Mrs. Clark did not ask the Council to take any action on the matter.
