Valleys North of Rome Can Teach Willamette Farmers Lessons in Making Country Attractive

BY HECTOR MACPHERSON. ROME, May 19.—(Special Correspondence.)—One feature of our visit to Genoa, especially worthy of mention is the city cemetery. It is probably the most costly cemetery in the world, and its special claim to renown consists in one of the finest collections of modern sculpture I have ever seen.

It is surely a unique place for the encouragement of art. Wealthy familles vie with each other in securing the services of the most famous modern sculptors to create something worthy of note in the long galleries of masterpieces which are to keep alive the names of wealthy Genoese who have passed to their reward. But among all passed to their reward. But among all the famous works of the cemetery, stands one which has a peculiar claim to recognition. It is of a country woman who during her life saved $2800 selling vegetables. With her earnings she had her image carved $16 size in marble, and a tomb made ready to receive her. The monument is known as the "Market Woman." It stands as the symbol of thrift ambition and particularly selected the same control of the same the symbol of thrift, ambition and per-severance—a determination to win a place among the illustrious dead of her city, which has surely been realized. Every Foot of Land in Use.

Leaving Genoa at 10 P. M., May 10, the commission arrived at Rome at $:30 Sunday morning. We saw nothing of the country between Genoa and Rome until we looked out of the window about 5 o'clock Sunday morning. Sleepy and fagged as we were, I found my colleague, Mr. Starkweather, with his nose flat against the pane studying the condition of the country through the condition of the country through which we were passing.

In the first place, it was borne in upon us that we of the beautiful Willamette Valley have much to learn from the valleys north of Rome in the art of making the country an attractive place in which to live. Every foot of land appeared to be in use, and all in a high state of productivity. Even the rocky hillsides were clothed in grapevines and olive trees. No crevice which could afford a rooting place for tree or shrub was left barren. The highways presented a hard, white surface which ran like silver lace through face which ran like silver lace through the verdure which clothed the country-

Herds, large and small, of oxen and cows gave life to the Sunday morning landscape; while their long bluish white bodies and high arching horns reminded us of the fact that here was a rural civilization which had its roots far back in antiquity. Here animals are of the same strain as the milk-white steer which grazed along "Citatumpus" in the days when the "great white steer which grazed along "Ciltumnus" in the days when the "great house of Tarquin" was struggling for its rights. They are a hardy herd, and especially prized as draft animals, though the flesh is inferior, and as dairy cattle they are of little account. This ancient strain is preserved mainly in the middle provinces, address to Pome.

Mayor Acts as Guide.

On Monday forences came our first tousiness session. Following this came a series of three brilliant functions in honor of the commission.

Most of the afternoon was occupied by a reception in the Capitol with Mayor Nathan as host. The Mayor personally conducted the commission through the priceless treasures of art and antiquity which crown the Capitol with difficult to find a guide more entertaining and athulating. Shrewd observation, scintiliating wit and brilliant sarcasm chained our attention as we passed from one to another of those relies of a forlous past.

There were present, the entire quota of delegates from the 50 nations which are members of the international institute of agriculture. The biennial general assembly of the institute had just closed and this banquet served the double function of a farewell to its delegates and of a welcome to the American commission. We were, however, the guests of honor of the evening, and to honor the country we represented, there were present many of the principal officials and noblemen of Italy.

Wit and wine flowed freely together, wit and wine flowed freely together, every sentence bearing its message of friendship and good will. Representa-tive Moss replied on behalf of the com-mission, simply and earnestly exbressing our gratitude for all the kindness bestowed upon us.

It was surely an occasion full of inspiration for anyone whose patriotism is ennobled by the larger passion for humanity. I question if the world has ever before witnessed such a banquet. There we were, brown men, yellow men and white men, representing haif a hundred different nations, and many different languages and races. Filled with a sense of kinship. We elbowed each other round the brillient banquet to half and spoke our good will in halting phrases, which served all too goorly to convey the nutual respect which arose spontaneously within us. Perhaps the most remarkable thing about the great banquet, was the fact that we were all interested in the proson of the world's great basic industry, agriculture.

To wind up the twentful day, we were driven to the Department of Foreign Affairs, where we were tendered a receiption by the minister. San Juiliano.

We had certainly been royally entry and when we returned to the hotel about midnight, we were all thoroughly fagged.

But in the meantime, we had made a start upon the real business which has brought us to Europe.

Lobby Inquiry Takes Startling Turn When Criticism Is Voiced by Townsend.

SENATORS ARE RECALLED

Michigan Man Says President's Own Arraignment of "Lobbies" Has in Itself Had Effect on Votes on Tariff.

WASHINGTON, June 6 .- An unexpected turn was given to the "lobby" investigation today when Senator Townsend, of Michigan, Republican. leclared on the stand that the influence wielded by President Wilson and the Democratic secret caucus on the making of the tariff bill constituted the "nearest approach to undue fluence on members of Congress" that the investigating committee would be able to find.

Senator Townsend criticised the committee for not having asked members of the Senate whether the President had sought to influence them and declared that, even though the President had not intended it, his recent denunciation of "lobbles" working in sup-

Administration "Neither Approves Nor Disapproves" Attorney-General's Scheme for Whacking Trust Through Tariff.

WASHINGTON, June 6 .- In view of the widespread idea that Attorney-General McReynolds' proposal for a graduated excise tax on the output of bacco was the expression of a new policy on the part of the Wilson Admin-istration to correct trust evils. White House officials today disclaimed that any general policy had been discussed any general policy had been discussed or adopted.

President Wilson and the Attorney-General discussed the numerous reports that had gone forth and later White House officials decided to explain just what had taken place in the councils of the Administration in the tobacco industry thus far.

Proposal Merely Suggestive.

The proposition of the Attorney-General was described as a "suggestion" offered on its merits for discussion, and bearing neither the approval nor disapproval of the Administration when broached to the Senate finance committee for consideration as an amendment to the pending tariff bill.

The White House version of the incidents of the last two days called attention first to the fact that Mr. McReynolds proposed identically the same scheme when the Aldrich-Payne tariff bill was under discussion, and pointing to the introduction at about the same Proposal Merely Suggestive.

bill was under discussion, and pointing to the introduction at about the same time of a bill by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, embodying similar ideas. The introduction by Mr. Hitchcock of practically the same measure yesterday was explained as having no connection with the suggestions made by the sattorney-General to the Cabinet on Tuesday.

Plan Not Yet Formal.

The Attorney-General, according to White House officials, was convinced by several prominent independent to-bacco manufacturers that their condition in competition with the so-called tobacc, trust was steadily growing more nopeless because the decree ordering the dissolution of the trust had not brought genuine competition. Three manufacturers told Mr. McReynolds that unless some remedy could be devised their business would be devised their business and the mind of the Attorney-General according to White House officials, that this should embody any general politoy. The President thus far has not expressed his optnion about the McReynolds proposal. In fact, it was said tonight, he has not regarded it as a formal plan of action, but as an idea, Plan Not Yet Formal. served in Washington that was wrong and cost money.

Senator Page, of Vermont, said his chief interest was in hide and calfskin trade and in fertilizer manufacturing.
