the ball was handled, partly handled, or mishandled eight distinct times. with shortstop, first baseman, catcher, third baseman, left fielder, catcher and pitcher figuring in the play in the order named. It happened in the first order named. It happened in the first inning, and incidentally resulted, plus preceding manipulations, in two runs for the Colts.

Double Play Is Welrd. Bancroft had scored from a pass, stolen base, wild heave to second by Cadreau and Heilmann's scratch hit to Yohe, Fitzgerald had retired via the flyout route, and Melchlor had sent Hellmann to second and stationed himself at first from a hit to left when the mixup was inaugurated. Peters hit to Harbison, who made a poor throw to first. McCarl did not deign to touch the bag, but pagged for the to first. McCarl did not deign to touch the bag, but pegged for the plate, Hannah tagging Heilmann. A low throw to third, in an effort to nip Melchior, went through Yohe, and Melchior, continued on to the plate. Milchlor continued on to the plate. Million recovered the ball and hurled it towards the plate, intent on stopping the speeding Peters. Hannah let the ball get through him, but recovered it in time to toss to Cadreau, waiting at the plate. Peters was across the rubber but he had falled to touch it, and was declared out when the Indian touched him.

The second inning was almost as with Hagerman, Krause and Krann her with Hagerman her with Hagerman K

The second inning was almost as with Hagerman, Krause and Krapp beweird as the first, with three Coits scoring on a melange of errors, walk, sacrifice hits and one bingle. The score was 5-0 at this stage of the game, and it continued without change to the end. Barring those two periods, it was a real diamond combat and a it was a real diamond combat and a topnotch twirling duel.

Hynes Vindicates Himself. Matt Hynes vindicated himself by pitching a three-hit game and holding state in the Indians scoreless. He was in a hole in the seventh, when Yohe and G Wagner singled in a row and Hellmann permitted Yohe to go to third when he let the ball roll between his legs. But I the Spokare third-sacker refused to the ball roll between his legs. But it the Spokane third-sacker refused to take a chance on scoring on Pappa's grounder to Bancroft, and Crum and Harbison succumbed to infield outs. way across the field.

Southpaw Stanley for Portland and Southpaw Kraft for Spokane seem due to hook up in a twirling duel this afternoon.

The Colts are now back above the .500 mark and the Indians are cinch cellarites. From the results of the two games the Indians will be lucky to take one this week. No sooner had Mohler manipulated his splendid stop in back of second than Bancroft made just as hard a stop in the short-field territory. Dave never looked better in his life than yesterday.

In the third inning Hannah hit the ball at Hynes. Matt stuck up his glove but failed to stop the ball, deflecting it to Mohler, who tossed out the backstop at first. way across the field.

In the ninth inning McCarl reached first on Peters' error but a lightning double play followed, with Bancroft touching second and tossing the ball to first. Hynes was up pitching for his job yesterday, for he would have been released following a duplication of Monday's inefficiency. Matt is due to remain a Colt much longer on his showing.
