LAWYER'S PROTEST BRINGS SUSPENSION

Judge Davis Bars Attorney Collier From Practice for Comment on Court.

BENCH AND JURORS DIFFER

Instructions for Verdict for Defendant in Damage Suit, Based on False Arrest Charge, Is Cause of Action.

Because he protested volubly yesterday when Circuit Judge Davis instruct ed a verdict for the defendant in the $25,000 damage suit of Ross C. Barnes against Saul Silverfield, furrier, for false arrest and malicious prosecution Frank T. Collier, an attorney, was sus pended from practicing by the Judge. Later Mr. Collier went to the other Circuit Judges and obtained from them statements that Judge Davis might speak for his own department, but not for theirs. "This man is a poor man and is en-titled to have his case go to the jury!" exclaimed Mr. Collier after Judge Davis had told the jury that the law is that a plaintiff cannot recover for false arrest if there was probable cause for believing him guilty, and had declared it to be his painful duty to order a verdict in favor of Mr. Silver-

Court's Tone Irritated,

"Mr. Collier, the court has ruled on this question. You have your remedy in the Supreme Court," interposed Judge Davis in irritated tones.

"That's a rich man's court," returned the attorney, and then it was that Judge Davis declared that Mr. Collier would be 'prohibited from practicing before the bar in this court until the Supreme Court saw fit to order other. Suprame Court saw fit to order other-wise." Mr. Collier retorted that he would take that question to the Su-

Later it was said that Judge Davis Later it was said that Judge Davis believed Mr. Collier had said, "This is a rich man's court." Mr. Barnes, the plaintiff, said that he has not the money to finance an appeal, but Stott & Collier, his atorneys, declared they will take the case up. They insist that it was a question of fact for the jury to determine whether or not Silverfield had reason to believe Barnes guilty when he caused his arrest last guilty when he caused his arrest last Fall, and that in taking this upon him-self the Judge usurped the function of Charles A. O'Connor, one of the jury who was selected as foreman to sign the verdict, openly declared afterwards that his mind had been made up in favor of Barnes. Others of the jury made similar declarations. After the verdict had been given Mr. Barnes' young wife caused a commotion by becoming hysterical and fainting in the young wife caused a commotion by be-coming hysterical and fainting in the corridor outside the courtroom. Barnes was employed last year by Silverfield as a foreman. After he left and went to the store of M. L. Gumbert, a rival furrier, he was arrested on a charge of wholesale thefts from his former employer, and a number of skins marked with the letter "S" found in Gumbert's store were seized. The grand jury refused to indict Barnes after he had been bound over by Justice Bell. At the trial Gumbert testified that the furs seized, and later returned, had been purchased by him from a concern in New York, which also uses the letter "S" in marking its goods.
