

SOMETHING NEW IS SEEN IN STAGE AND

'The Passing Show of 1912' Is Hit From First to Last at Heilig Theater.

PIECE FULL OF NOVELTY

Arrows of Humor, Aimed at Men, Women and Events, Find Their Mark—Audience Gripped by Song and Pantomime.

Something new to Portland stage-land visited the City of Roses last night and took it quite by storm. A comedy wonderfully beautiful in its scenic effects, joyfully humorous, happily-go-lucky, little in its travesties, deliciously daring, delightfully dainty and unduly diabolical in its chorus. 'Twas 'The Passing Show of 1912,' which left a first night's audience at the Heilig Theater weak with laughter and to which palm of place must be awarded over all else of musical comedy that has been seen here this season.

Truly kaleidoscopic, as betrays its name, 'The Passing Show of 1912' aims the arrow of its humor and delicate cynicism at men, women and events. The plays most talked of in town are caricatured, travestied and turned from the sublime to the ridiculous; all the songs that one ever heard are parodied. There are three hours of strenuous, ever passing, ever moving attractions. Characters appear one moment, disappear for a second and are back again in divers and such absolutely diverse costumes that one was kept busy keeping track of them all. Vandeville, musical comedy divine, gave all the credit of their best to make this "show" a success.

Chorus Sings in Audience.

First of all, there are numerous novelties. One is the runway, which stretches out into the audience and right to the back of the house. Along this, periodically, runs the chorus, singing right at the people on each side. Light effects along this, electric sparks on the shoes of the girls, all combine in their appeal to the unusual.

There is the bathing scene, in which scantily clad maidens are lounging lazily near a gorgeous pool. At a certain moment and a dozen of them, draped in pink nothings, plunge into the pool, a mirror reflecting their movements for the benefit of the girls, all combine in their appeal to the unusual.

Another delightful scene is that of a New York park garden, which gives way in a second to the streets of New York in 1910 A. D. 'The Bought and Paid For' house is another example of artistic setting.

Willie and Eugene Howard are two of the greatest successes of the play.

Their yiddish humor, coupled with their excellent voices, hold the audience from the start to the end. Trizie Frigana, very plump, very much at her ease, with her grotesque imitations, her enthusiasm and her delightful voice.

Hare and Rosa Win Laughs.

Earnest Hare, whether as Officer 666 or the Head Waiter, or someone else, is equally at his ease. He is a mermaid, making 'Hare and Rosa' was especially happy as the strenuous citizen with his big stick.

So much cannot be said of the dancing of a regular nymph, Adelaide, for on every appearance she brought down the house. J. J. Hughes, who reported her as also graceful and agile to a degree.

Moore and Morris must be numbered among the successes.

Miss Louie Brunell hits the stage now and then as a demure Quaker girl. She has more than one song, all of them delivered in pleasing manner. Dainty Texas Gail, too, scintillates time and time again.

The Passing Show of 1912' will continue all the week, with matinees on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

CITY PROBES LIGHTS

Municipal Illuminating Plant Under Consideration.

ONE POWER SITE OFFERED

Public Utility Certificates May Be Issued for Purchase of Equipment if Plan Is Carried Out by Commissioners.

A comprehensive investigation to determine the feasibility of a municipal electric plant for lighting streets and public buildings in Portland has been started by Mayor Albee and members of the City Commission. The details of cost, location and extent of operation have been considered in a tentative way.

Mayor Albee said yesterday that the proposed plant has been discussed several times by the Commission and while there are no definite data upon which to base such opinion, it is believed it could be made a financial success. Plans for a site have been considered but no conclusions reached.

Commissioner Daly went to Salem Saturday to look over the records of ownership of a number of power sites near Portland and also to investigate a site which it is said has been offered to the city. The driver of the Sheriff's automobile was the only man in the car to escape the bullets. He jumped in the machine and fled.

Workers Refuse to Disperse. After the firing stopped the survivors of the posse were permitted to gather the dead and wounded and take them away. They hastened back to Marysville.

The striking hop pickers, it is reported, have refused to disperse. A special dispatch from 190 citizens of Marysville have formed a posse to go to Wheatland.

Sheriff's Sister Lives Here. Mrs. E. M. Rosenthal, of 35 East Eleventh street, North, is a sister of Sheriff Voss. Mrs. Rosenthal formerly lived in Marysville, but has been a resident of Portland for 15 years. Mr. Voss is 50 years old and has been in office for 12 years.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE GETS TWO NEW INSTRUCTORS, ONE FROM OHIO, OTHER FROM SEATTLE.

CATHERINE T. VANCE AND GRACE C. ROSAEN. Two new instructors completing the quota of English teachers at Oregon Agricultural College for the coming year are Miss Catherine T. Vance, of Wooster, O., who also will act as secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, and Miss Grace C. Rosaen, of Seattle. Miss Vance comes to the agricultural college from the Boise High School. Her teaching experience also covers three years in Eastern high schools and one year at James Millikin University, Decatur, Ill. Miss Vance is a graduate of the University of Wooster and has a master's degree in English from Columbia.

Miss Rosaen was graduated at the Seattle schools and later attended Emerson College, where she received a diploma for work in English and dramatics. At Oregon Agricultural College Miss Rosaen will teach the elective course in elocution and interpretation and coach the student dramatic productions.

DRY TRIP PUTS 'DRYS' IN WET ROW

Two Factions Refuse to Associate During Journey From Beach.

ENGINE PLAYS RUDE JOKE

Tank Spout, Left Low Over Tracks, Bursts and Pours Floods on Irrate Passengers—Bridal Couple Suspect Plot.

Passengers on the train which arrived in Portland from the Tillamook beaches by electric train Sunday, were easily classified as "wets" and "drys."

"This all sat on the right-hand side of the train and they didn't associate with the 'drys,' who sat on the left-hand side, because the 'drys' would not let them. A good reason for this was that the 'wets' were literally, truly and fearfully wet—both wet and dripping. Every time one of them would move he'd shake about a gallon of water from his clothes.

Some of the 'drys' told drily of peculiar climatic conditions prevailing on the right-hand side of the train, as it passed through the town of Beaverton, where something happened.

The engine of a preceding locomotive that took water from the Beaverton tank left the spout too low. The engine of the beach train hit that spout and broke it off. The next thing of importance was a deluge of water as big around as a man's leg, which poured out exactly the height of a train window.

There were four coaches behind the locomotive. They were all filled with passengers, and the windows were all open. As the cars passed the rampant tank, the effect was like that of swabbing down a plank fence with a garden hose.

Those on the left-hand side weren't splashed, but it was because there wasn't any water left after those splashing by the right-hand side had absorbed the stream. Even the men's coat pockets and the women's laps were drenched.

Most of the drenched passengers took it good-naturedly, but one young bridal couple on their honeymoon wanted to sue the company. They had suspected it was a plot against their happiness. A claim agent who went around with the conductor pacified them.

One passenger, a traveling man, who said he had to take the night train to San Francisco, had his suit on his back with him and it was drenched. He talked it over with the claim agent and the claim agent made a settlement from the company's fund.

On arriving in Portland the claim agent proposed that the traveling man should go to a hotel, remove his suit and then go to bed. The claim agent promised to have a man ready to take the suit to the hotel, remove his suit and then go to bed. NEW YORK MILLIONAIRE AND CHAUFFEUR

Killed Returning From Vanderbilt Dinner.

LONG BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 3.—S. Osogood Pell, a millionaire real estate broker of New York City, with his chauffeur, whose name could not be learned, were killed at Long Beach crossing tonight when their automobile was struck by an electric train.

The electric train struck the automobile with terrific force, forcing the car into the air and bearing it along in front of it for 50 feet or more before the train could be stopped. From the car fell a man and a woman, the names of Pell and his chauffeur were taken.

Mr. Pell's body was terribly crushed. Mr. Lainbeer and Mrs. Lainbeer, who held her first marriage with Miss Natalia Lainbeer, one of the most popular girls in New York and Newport society, were hurled many feet in the air and landed in the road.

In a car following the one that was struck Mrs. Pell and a party of friends were riding. She was brought to Long Beach, where she was attended by physicians.

EARLY PROSPECTOR DIES

Charles Gentis, Who Hunted Gold and Fought Indians, Passes.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Aug. 3.—(Special.)—Charles Gentis, 69 years old, who had been here since before the Civil War, died last night at the home of E. M. O'Donnell, near Battleground. Gentis was an old miner, having prospected from the Canadian line to the Mexican border. He operated a pack trail for the Government in the pioneer days and had many fights and skirmishes with the Indians. He was fond of telling stories to the children and often told of the heavy snow of 1861, when the cattle by the hundreds and deer were easily caught, breaking the crust on top of the snow.

OPEN FORUM IGNORES BAN

Meeting Held on Campus at Seattle Without Permission.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 3.—(Special.)—Despite the order of the board of regents of the University of Washington that no public meetings be held on the campus without a written permit of the board, the Open Forum, a gathering with single tax and socialist leanings, held its regular Sunday afternoon meeting on the college grounds this afternoon.

Glenn E. Hoover was elected chairman of the day.

Richard Mansfield White, brother of the late Stanford White, who was slain by Harry Thaw in New York several years ago, was appointed a committee of one to approach the regents to obtain written permit from them for the continuance of the Sunday meetings.

The ignoring of the regents' order therefore was only temporary.

A machine has been perfected which pours any dry powder into a paper bag, folds the bag and a folded circular within it, pastes the label and seals the box, at the rate of 1500 boxes in an hour.
