Mazamas Explore Underground Lava Riff and Ice Palace Near Mt. Adams.

MOUNTAIN CAMP SHIFTED

After Long "Hike" Climbers Enjoy Foot Baths in Icy Creek—Seven Miles Prove to Be 20—Mosquitoes Are Democratic.

BY ANNE SHANNON MONROE. MAZAMA CAMP, Aug. 2.—(After Sunset).—Today was passed most gloriously in the "hike" to the caves, both lava and ice. Ordinary mortals, so rumor says, are satisfied with "hiking" to one of these caves in one day, but the Mazamas couldn't feel equal to a square meal on less than two. By country computation, it is a matter of seven miles there and seven back, unless you cut through the alfalfa fields, by the pedometer on Mr. Ballou's reliable ankles, the round trip distance was 20 miles; but this included the exploration of the caves.

Dr. Barck, scientist, later perched on the rocks at the mouth of the cave, and explained his theory of its formation, while the photographer snapped away for dear life. Dr. Barck is adding each day to our intelligent appreciation of old Mother Nature's queer antics by his lucid and entertaining talks from time to time. He is this minute talking to the group by a giant fir bough fire, in a sort of open debate. Others have other theories. If I join them to hear these theories, I will write no letter tonight, and if I write no letter, what good will it do? The Oregonian readers for me to know the theories? May be I can report later.

Cave Is Woody Hole. To the plain, every-day layman, the lava cave is a woody hole in the earth; enormous, threatening to drop rocks on your head every minute, but not once doing it. It is dark, rough, terrible; a constant suggestion of terrible possibilities.

A bear might paw you, a lion roar from any corner, but the awful, actual feeling is that Dante lost it out of his "Inferno" and thereby omitted a masterpiece of a climax. You're sorry for Dante and shivering in the Wintry cold of its black depths, you wish he'd been a bit less careful with his old-fashioned conceptions. It belongs in a "fully bound and padded book, held in the easy, relaxed grasp of a kimonoed woman, before a cozy fire on a riotous Winter evening, with all safe within.

Now the ice cave is quite a different affair. You walk five miles farther—yes, uphill all the way, and you get over that chafing feeling long before you approach the cave. You are not you discard sweaters, canteens, lunch bags—every living thing you can carry a man into the cave. You arrive and climb down the narrow precipitous ladder and yell wildly for your possessions once more. It's like going into a refrigerator on a July day in New York, to see how your furs are standing it. But oh, it is beautiful!

Ice Cave Marvelous. After the ice cave has patiently given up all your extra clothes, and you have wound yourself into them, you can see that the ice cave is a marvel. It's something so different, so strange, so stalagmites of pure distilled water, solidified and formed with the most delicate fluted columns and cones. Every particle of ice is a work of art, and reflects the most delicate colors.

All kinds of formations start the imagination working; saintly kneeling nuns, beautiful and regal, in forms of rare crystal, marvelous in mass and detail, and all flawless. No dust or dirt seems able to enter the cave of sacred expression. All is pure and perfect. The candles throw their rays over this cave, bringing forth exclamations of wonder and something akin to awe from the 50 Mazamas.

Foot Bath Is Ivy. But lovely as it was we had to walk home, so we started. Cook Weston rewarded us at 6 P. M., when we were in, more dead than alive—as he alone reward a trail-worn and cave-exhausted crew. The caves he had to answer for were more in our minds at the moment than any other. How we ate—clam chowder—that's just one thing—and then we fled along the cold, cold creek and hung our feet in, and breathed deep—Mr. Benefield insists that cold water does for feet just what hot water does for the rest of the body. How wonderful it has all been. We wondered how those people in town could stand it, not to be lined up with us. The sun went down and the sky all around took on soft, rosy, moon-tinted, and gentle little rifty clouds of pinky-whites floated innocently overhead, and everything grew sacredly calm and still.

Just then Woodrow spoke—and every one started into wide-awakeness, as when some one says "the world is new." Woodrow is the newest arrival to date. He is the only burro on the mountain and feels his importance in the world. A second party of people is coming up from Portland Saturday to join us in the main camp, Camp Riley, 12 miles higher up the mountain side, to which we will "hike" tomorrow, breaking camp here at 5 A. M.

Evening Sky Impressive. My candle sputters in its last agonies, but I just must add that if every city dweller could see this sort of blue-black bowl of a sky with its fleecy clouds and the stars so bright and clear, and hear the roaring of the creek and the sounds of joyous well-being that steal up to my perch from the campfire (they are singing now) there would not be left in town a man to keep shop or a woman to buy. There would be one long, unending stream from Portland Adamward. So far, an outing was never better managed and harmony never retained more serene. Now I'll go hear about what our real scientist thinks about the caves.

P. S.—A few mosquitoes have heard of us and are tonight giving us a reception. The farmers ask suspiciously, "What nationality are those Mazamas, anyway?" But the mosquitoes, democratic souls, don't care a rap!

Polk County Rabbits Move. BUENA VISTA, Or., Aug. 4.—Jack-rabbits in Polk County, and especially in this section, have disappeared. Two years ago the animals were so thick that teamsters saw automobile drivers would run over them on the highways. Where the rabbits have gone cannot be ascertained.

WASHINGTON GOVERNOR NAMES WOMAN TO CLEAN UP STATE'S BAKERIES.

TACOMA, Wash., Aug. 4.—(Special).—Miss Arizona B. Wimple, City Pure Food and Market Inspector of Tacoma, has been appointed by Governor Lister as State Bakery and Sanitary Inspector. She will work under Superintendent Perkins, of the newly-created State Agricultural Commission. Miss Wimple has been Pure Food Inspector of Tacoma for about a year, having been appointed to that position by Mayor W. W. Seymour to succeed Miss Esther Allstrum. Miss Wimple is a graduate of Michigan Agricultural College, and a young woman of tireless energy. During her year of service for the City of Tacoma she has done a notable work in the way of enforcing cleanliness in bakeries, markets and candy stores and factories. With the bakeries she has inaugurated a system of scoring, and monthly scores are published in the daily papers, and these have been an important factor in improving the condition of Tacoma bakeries. Miss Wimple goes about her work quietly, but with determination, and seldom has she had to apply to the courts to compel the enforcement of any clauses of the pure-food ordinance.

GOOS FOLK AROUSED

Governor's Expressions Cause Considerable Indignation.

POWERS REFUTES CHARGE

Reports Regarding Timber Man and Officers, in I. W. W. Deportation Controversy, Denied—Correspondent Also Accused.

MARSHFIELD, Or., Aug. 4.—(Special).—O. H. Powers, head of the Smith-Powers Logging Company, when shown Governor West's denunciation of him as the "kingpin" of the movement to oust Dr. Leach from Bandon, said that he had little to say at this time. He said that Governor West was wrong in that he (Powers) did not see the deportation, neither of Leach nor of Secretary Edgeworth and other I. W. W. members, and that he was not a part in their activities.

PRIEST SEVERELY HURT

Rev. Father Alphonse Bronsgeest, of The Dalles, Has 22 Stitches Taken in Scalp Wound.

THE DALLES, Or., Aug. 4.—(Special).—With a broken leg, a cut on the head which required 22 stitches and severe bruises of the body, Rev. Father Alphonse Bronsgeest, of St. Peter's Catholic Church of this city, lies in The Dalles Hospital, having been severely injured last night when his automobile went off a grade and turned over three times.

The priest was returning to this city from Dufur, accompanied by Father Cantwell of Dufur. He was driving down the "Benson grade," keeping well to the outside so that he might be able to see a team should there be one coming up the hill, and while going around a sharp turn the hind wheels dropped into soft dirt and the car left the grade, looping the loop three times before stopping 40 feet below. Father Cantwell escaped with slight bruises.

The automobile was not greatly damaged. One axle and the fenders were badly bent and the top and windshield were demolished.

VICTOR BERGER IS HEARD

Socialist and ex-Congressman Makes Address in Seattle.

SEATTLE, Aug. 4.—Victor Berger, ex-Congressman from Milwaukee, in an address here tonight touched on the recent riots only briefly, saying that Seattle Socialists would not be law-abiding citizens if they did not see the cause of the riots. He warned those who encouraged violence that their own property would not be safe when the "other fellows" began rioting. He said: "The red flag stands for international brotherhood. You should love and respect it. The American flag stands for the experiment in political democracy. You should respect and love it."

GEORGE OGLE IS DROWNED

Former State Representative Loses Life at Molalla.

MOLALLA, Or., Aug. 4.—(Special).—George Ogle, aged 45, was drowned today here in 40 feet of water, while in bathing with his niece, Mrs. Gurley. Mrs. Ogle was sitting on the shore at the time and saw her husband go to death, unable to render assistance. The body was recovered tonight at 10 o'clock.

Ogle was seized with cramps soon after going into the water and, though considered a good swimmer, he was unable to reach shore. He was seen to rise to the surface once. Ogle was a Representative in the State Legislature in 1906-8, having been elected on the Populist ticket.

DESTROYERS TO COST $225,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—The New York Shipbuilding Company, of Camden, N. J., was the lowest bidder for the construction of the torpedo-boat destroyers for which proposals were opened today, at $225,000 each, for two boats. None of the six bidders offered to construct more than two boats each, so that, as there are six to be built, there will be a chance for some of the high bidders.
