"I leave the Northern Pacific in bet-ter condition than ever before to do its part as one of the great agencies for building up the Northwest. "I am not going to say 'good-bye,' because I shall hope to see many of my friends from the Northwest when they are in New England, Boston and New York and when my vacation time comes in 1914 and 1915 I shall hope to make a trip over the Northern Pacific, the best-railroad in the American Northwest." "The Northwest and my many friends in it and the Northern Pacific always will be very dear to me and I hope in my new work in the East I can continue to tell the East what a wonderful country there is in the West."
