IRONWORKER RIDES LOAD OF LUMBER FROM GROUND TO TWELFTH STORY OF NORTHWESTERN BANK BUILDING

NELS MAKEHUST, BALANCING THE LOAD IN MID-AIR.
Nels Makehust, ironworker, makes many trips a day on an odd sort of an elevator. He does not make them because he likes the ride, but to keep several hundred feet of lumber balanced in the air, so that the planks will not turn endwise and plunge to the street, and so that the load will reach the landing at the twelfth story, 175 feet above the street, "on an even keel." If it did not reach the lofty landing in a horizontal position, it would be difficult to land. Makehust climbs on the load after it has been placed in a looped steel cable and the wagon has been drawn from beneath it, and as the load rises in the air he keeps it level by shifting the weight of his body.

LITTLE RELIEF IS PROMISED KANSAS

Heat Wave Throughout Middle Western State Continues Without Abatement.

NO RAIN IS PREDICTION

Railroads Hauling Water for Engines—Private Lake, Near Salina, Relied on for the Last Thirty Years, Is Now Dry.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 6.—Although temperatures in the Southwest averaged a few degrees lower today than yesterday, Kansas felt little relief, as in many parts of that state thermometers registered above 100 degrees. The heat centers in the state were Salina and Junction City, where the maximum temperatures were 108. At Independence, Kan., a new record for the year was established when the mercury climbed to 106. Topeka reported a temperature of 103.

In some parts of Kansas railroad companies are forced to haul water used in their engines. At Salina, a private owner's lake that has not been without water for 20 years, now is dry. The Cottonwood River is dry at Florence. The Government forecaster here said tonight that there was no immediate prospect of rain in Kansas. Temperatures in many parts of Oklahoma reached the 100 mark or higher today.
