IN RACE WITH TRAIN AIRMAN LEADS WAY

Murvin Wood Forced to Land 16 Miles From Goal, as Engine Goes Wrong.

SMOKE AND FOG BOTHER

Test From New York to Washington Is Made Against Odds, but Birdman Says New Marks for Nonstop Flying Were Made.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 .- C. Murvin Wood, the American aviator who attempted today a non-stop race in his inonoplane with a train from New York to Washington and thence to Fort Myer, Va., for exhibition flights, reached his destination late this after-noon after he had been compelled to interrupt his flight on a farm near Galthersburg, Md., 18 miles from Wash-

Wood won his race with the train, making the landing at Galthersburg at 1 minute after 9 o'clock, 49 minutes before the train rolled into the union station. He failed to break all the American records he had hoped to smash, but says he made new marks for non-stop flying between two points and for duration.

Wood set out to replace all the records established by Lieutenant Thomas DeW. Milling, of the Army aviation corps, His greatest disappointment, he declared, was in not having set a new sunrise to sunset record.

Milling's Distance Exceeded. In all, Wood estimates he flew 28; miles in covering his circuitous route from Hempstead Field, where the flight started at 4:30 o'clock this morning, to the fleid at Gaithersburg, where engine trouble forced a landing at 8:01 o'clock, 4 hours 31 minutes later. The actual airline distance is estimated at 280 miles, which exceeds by ten miles the distance record held by Lieutenant Milling. In all, Wood estimates he flew 28

"I was lost almost from the minute "I was lost almost from the minute I started. Getting across New York harbor, I ran into a thick fog and couldn't tell if I was over land or water. To make my discomfort greater, engine trouble began to develop before I had been in the air 15 minutes. It cleared up soon and I went over the harbor at about 6000 feet, rising over the fog banks, and did not see land again until I was over Trenton. Then I had more engine trouble and volplaned down to about 2500 feet when the engine picked up again and I went on Premier Asquith Tells Women He of the 17th constitutional amendment, Has Not Changed Views.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Premier Asquith discussed woman suffrage today with Mrs. Millicent Fawcatt, president of the National Union of Woman's Suf-

The Premier complimented his vistors on their constitutional methods, which he said were "a welcome contrast to the criminal proceedings" of the militant suffragettes, He, however, frankly declared that he had undergone no change of heart in the matter.

attack by way of the Sound has been demonstrated, according to unofficial views expressed by Army and Naval officials tonight, by the joint maneuvers last week. Captain William S. Sims, commanding the Atlantic torpedo flotilla, declared that Army officers agreed with the Navy as to the weakness of the coast defenses.

"The maneuvers," he said, "showed that destroyers could and did run through in the dark repeatedly and without being seen by the forts."

According to the War Department, the week's maneuvers have not been in the nature of a competition between the Army and Navy. They were for the purpose of testing the organization of the coast defense service. For the last few years much attention has been devoted to standardfaing this branch of the service. It was realized also that since the last joint maneuthe week's maneuvers have not been in the nature of a competition between the Army and Navy. They were for the purpose of testing the organization of the coast defense service. For the last few years much attention has been devoted to standardfaing this branch of the service. It was realized also that since the last joint maneuvers in 1905 the Navy has made a long advance in tactics, especially as regards the use of destroyers and submarines. Because of the new ideas introduced into both the coast defense and the Navy the War Department expected to gain much valuabale information from the week's practice in the Sound.
