NEW BRIDGE CLOSES

Streetcar Routings Changed During Repairs.

WORK WILL TAKE 8 DAYS

Railway Service Not to Be Interrupted by Replacing of Girders Damaged by Fire on Upper Deck of Harriman Span.

While workmen are taking out 80 tons of twisted girders from the flooring of the upper deck of the Harriman bridge and replacing them with new steel the span will be closed to streetcar, vehicular and pedestrian traffic for the next eight days, beginning today.

George W. Boschke, chief engineer of the O. W. R. & N. Company, said yesterday that repairs to the bridge necessitated by the recent fire will be rushed forward day and night.

Just as soon as the new steel girders are in place cars will be permitted to cross the structure. He said that the bridge probably can be opened to all traffic by September 1.

The 30 tons of steel to be replaced is a small part of the total of 10,000 tons in the entire bridge. Mr. Boschke said that a thorough survey had shown no vital part of the bridge damaged by the fire and that a small percentage of the girders had been warped by the heat.

The girders that support the car tracks will not have to be replaced, but the wooden stringers under the plank deck are so charred and burned in places that they must be renewed. The damaged girders are those which supported the sidewalks and the roadway.

The only part of the steel framework of the bridge damaged was some of the light sections of the outer supports to the draw towers.

All the steel required is being fabricated in Portland at the plant of the Northwest Steel Company, where men are working night and day to turn it out.

When the Harriman bridge is replanked and opened to traffic again after an expenditure for repairs that Mr. Boschke estimates at between $50,000 and $60,000, a similar fire will be virtually impossible. When the new planking is put down it will be protected on the under side by a sheathing of galvanized iron. There will be no exposed wooden surface beneath to catch fire. The wooden sidewalks will be replaced also by fireproof ones.

Operation of railway trains on the lower deck will not be interrupted.
