The game was a walkover for the Beavers. A bad first inning by "Cheerful" Charley Pruitt robbed the diamond affairs of any interest that may have cropped up. The northmen gathered three runs at the jump and were never headed, adding a couple more for good measure in the sixth.

James Has Delightful Time. "Laughing Bill" James, on the other hand, had a delightful time of it. He laughed his way through the nine innings with only six hits falling to the lot of the Oaks. The Beavers did not gather so many base knocks themselves, six coming their way, but they made them count. Of the six, four were for extra bases, one of them being a triple.

It was the first inning, however, which finished up the afternoon's entertainment. Chadbourne singled to center and dashed to third, on Derrick's hit through short when Cook went to cover second. Rodgers walked, filling up the sacks. Lindsay tapped an easy one down by short, but even with Cookplaying in and taking the ball on the first bounce, he threw woefully low to the plate and Chadbourne scored. James' control got him in trouble in the eighth, for he hit Gardner for the second time during the afternoon. One was out when Hetling singled through Rodgers. Gardner kept on to third. A long sacrifice fly to left from Coy's bat scored Gardner. But that was all of another discouraging defeat for the trans-bay boys. Score:
